

Henry Ford, 83, Auto Pioneer, Dies At Home In Dearborn

By DAVID J. WILKIE
Detroit, April 8 (AP)—In the flickering light of kerosene lamps and candles Henry Ford, famed pioneer of the automobile industry, died at 11:40 o'clock last night in his home in nearby Dearborn.
He would have reached his 84th birthday next July 30.
High flood waters of the River Rouge running through the Ford estate had cut power and heating services at the residence — and a wood-burning fireplace warmed the room.
Cerebral Hemorrhage
Mr. Ford's death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.
It came after the noted industrialist had spent a vigorous day inspecting flood-water damage around the Ford plant and was making plans for another inspection this morning.

HENRY FORD

At his bedside were his wife, Mrs. Clara Bryant Ford, and a member of the household staff.
A family statement said he had retired at 9 p. m. (EST) and had awakened at 11:15 p. m., complaining he felt slightly ill. Mrs. Ford gave him a drink of water. He died 25 minutes later.

Funeral Thursday
The statement said that even telephone service from the residence was out of commission because of the flood waters and that an employee had to go to the company's engineering laboratory, nearly half a mile from the residence, to summon a physician.

Dr. John Mateer, of the Henry Ford hospital, who arrived at 12:15 a. m. (Tuesday) said death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Funeral services will be held from St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral in Detroit on Thursday at an hour to be announced later.

The body was taken to a Detroit funeral home this morning and will be returned to the Ford Greenfield Village to lie in state all day Wednesday.

"Crazy Ideas" Brought Fortune
All Ford operations throughout the world will be suspended on Thursday. Flags on all Ford property will be at half staff until after the funeral.

Mr. Ford's death marked the passing of not only one of the world's most noted industrialists but of an individual who developed one of the most colossal family fortunes the world has known out of what often had been ridiculed as "a lot of crazy ideas."

Described in numerous citations as "of the select company assured of perpetual fame," Ford, a one-time obscure farm youth, was also credited with having "brought into being an industry that changed the course of the world."

He developed his great industrial empire, for which he was once said to have refused $1,000,000,000, out

Ford Borrowed 50 Cents To Buy Gettysburg Book

Some Gettysburgians will recall one of Henry Ford's visits to Gettysburg a number of years ago. He had visited the Battlefield on several occasions but was not always recognized.

On one occasion the wealthy motor magnate came here with a chauffeur and another man, believed to be his bodyguard. The three men walked around the square and looked in store windows on other streets. When they returned to their unpretentious five-passenger Ford sedan on Carlisle street the late Tom Hardy approached Mr. Ford and asked if he wished to purchase some Gettysburg booklets. One book sold for fifty cents.

Mr. Ford delved into his pockets and although reported to be worth millions of dollars, failed to produce any money. He turned to one of the men in his party and said: "Lend me fifty cents will you?" He then purchased the book.

A reporter recognized Ford and invited him into the business office of The Gettysburg Times. He graciously accepted, was introduced to the business office staff, signed some autographs and then departed.

Council Adopts Daylight Time; Contribute $500 To Library, Recreation, Band

Borough Council, at its regular April meeting at the fire engine house Monday night, voted contributions of $500 each to the recreation program here, the Adams Co. Free Library association, and the Blue and Gray band; increased the hourly pay of borough employees from 65 to 70 cents and earmarked $1,000 again for mosquito extermination.

Council also adopted Daylight Saving Time for the borough, "unofficially," by approving a resolution which follows the action it took a year ago, directing that borough employees go to work an hour earlier for the fast time period, beginning April 28. It also moved up the time of its regular meetings.

Contracts were awarded for stone and oil for street resurfacing. Action on a proposal to purchase a motorcycle for the police department was tabled again until the next meeting.

Need Borough Workers

Provision was made in the 1947 budget for contributions to the library, recreation board and the band, Councilman H. M. Oyer said. On his motion, Borough Treasurer John H. Basehor was directed to draw checks for the $500 to be given to each organization.

Pay of borough workers was increased five cents an hour after Borough Engineer LeRoy H. Winebrenner told council that work of his department was being seriously handicapped because he could not get them. He said three employees had resigned because they could make more working some place else.

"I had nine men during the winter," Winebrenner said. "Three have quit for more money. Factories are paying 65 cents an hour for 40 hours and overtime, and men are working 50 hours," he said.

Winebrenner cited the street repairs, sewer work, painting lines on the streets and other jobs needing attention with the advent of good weather, and said these jobs could not be done properly with the present number of employees.

The motion for the increase in pay was made by Councilman Oyer, and is effective as of April 15.

Councilmen, Fred. A. Hummelbaugh, H. M. Oyer, and L. D. Shealer, members of the mosquito committee last year, were re-appointed. The committee will hold a meeting in the near future, subject to the call of Burgess C. A. Heiges.

As was the case a year ago, Borough Solicitor Eugene V. Bulleit informed council that there is already a law on the Pennsylvania statute books which prohibits municipalities from changing the time by moving the clocks. He said, however, that time of meetings and working hours could be changed, which, in effect, places the borough on "fast time."

Contract for stone for road work was awarded to the Bethlehem Steel company, and for road oil to William S. Hammaker, Harrisburg. The Bethlehem company submitted a bid of $1.15 per ton F.O.B. quarry; $1.90 per ton delivered at the borough shed and $2 a ton spread on the streets. Only other bidder for stone was John Teeter and Sons, who bid $1.25 F.O.B. quarry; $1.60 at the shed and $1.85 spread, but with a proviso that $2.55 per hour be charged for all time that trucks were held up in delivering stone.

Receive Oil Bids

The contract was awarded on Winebrenner's recommendation that the Bethlehem company's limestone was better as a top dressing on highways than the blue stone of the Teeter company.

Bids for road oil were submitted as follows: Lancaster Valley, Inc., .165 per gallon; William S. Hammaker, Harrisburg, .1594 per gallon; John S. Teeter and Sons, .158 per gallon; Service Supply company, York, .1625 per gallon. All prices were applied on the highways. The engineer was also authorized to purchase one truckload of tar for patching purposes.

Council referred to the Burgess A. (Please turn to Page 2)

6-Year-Old Heroine Loses Life In Seattle Bus Tragedy

Seattle, April 8 (AP)—The heroism of a six-year-old girl inside a partly submerged bus was credited today by survivors with saving many lives.

The child, identified as Darlene Wick of Portland, Ore., was one of nine persons who lost their lives in a bus-truck wreck.

Survivors said that amidst the screaming and panic inside the partially submerged bus, she stood calmly and in an even voice directed the efforts of volunteer rescuers who cut through the metal top to extricate passengers.

Town Parking Meters Are Paid

With the payment of $868.57 to the Miller Meter corporation this month, Gettysburg's parking meters will be paid for, and become the property of the borough. All collections will henceforth go into the borough treasury.

Borough Treasurer John H. Basehor reported to council at its meeting Monday night at the engine house that $868.57 was the balance due the meter company. He was authorized to make the final payment.

The meters were installed late in 1945, at a cost of $75 each. Collections during March were: Center Square, $366.51; Baltimore street, $408.18; York street, $332.36; Chambersburg street, $399.05 and Carlisle street, $131.28.

HIGHLAND TWP. REARRANGES ITS SCHOOL SYSTEM

The Highland Township School board Monday evening voted to reassign pupils to the two township schools so that all boys and girls in the first four grades will attend Glenwood school next fall and those in the upper four grades will go to Church school.

By taking the action the board became the first of those county school districts affected to meet its requirements under the provisions of School Act 403 which becomes effective in September.

Members of the board discussed three alternatives under the new law at their meeting held in Church school. The first, posed by President Charles Wert, was to attempt to justify to the state Council of Education continuation of the operation of the two schools with grades one through eight in each school.

The second alternative, he said, was to grade the schools in which case the township board would not have to apply to the state council for permission to operate, as the requirements would be met.

The third alternative was to send the 53 pupils in the district to some other school district and close the Highland schools.

After some discussion on motion of Charles Chuck seconded by Harry Trostle the board voted unanimously to divide the upper and lower grades.

Only slight adjustments were necessary in transportation to effect the graded school system, the board found. Donald Walters will continue to drive the Knoxlyn road past Glenwood school and Church school (Please Turn To Page Two)

She has also appeared on "The Voice of Firestone" and other well-known radio programs. She was formerly the head of the Nannie Burroughs School of Music, Lincoln Heights, Washington, D. C. Pleads Not Guilty On Murder Charge

Grant F. Logan, Glen Rock, formerly of East Berlin, accused of murder for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Hazel Hamburger Wagner at her home, 233 Roosevelt avenue, York, on February 16, pleaded not guilty before Judge Walter I. Anderson in York Monday afternoon.

He was arraigned at 2:15 o'clock after the grand jury for the April term of quarter sessions court returned a bill of indictment charging him with murder on the first count and manslaughter on the second count as a true bill. The case is now listed for trial by jury.

MOVIE ACTRESS MARJORIE MAIN VISITS MONDAY IN LITTLESTOWN

Marjorie Main, well-known Hollywood movie actress, spent several hours in Littlestown Monday.

The purpose of her trip there was to visit the grave of her husband, the late Dr. Stanley Krebs, who is buried in Mt. Carmel cemetery, Littlestown. When interviewed, Miss Main stated that this was her second visit to his grave since he was buried here twelve years ago. Dr. Krebs, former resident of Littlestown, was a well-known educator in New York, and is related to the LeFevres of Littlestown.

Miss Main arrived on the 10:30 a. m. train from York, and left on the 2:15 p. m. train, intending to go to New York from Littlestown. She ate breakfast at Schottie's restaurant and then visited Mt. Carmel cemetery. She called at the Little funeral home, and Mr. Little gave her information as to the location of the graves of some of her late husband's relatives. Before leaving, she had lunch at Schottie's. Word had spread around town that the actress was in town, and about 100 persons were at the train when she departed.

Miss Main stated that her last picture was "The Egg and I," which is currently playing in this vicinity. She divides her time between California and New York. It is her present intention to be buried here beside her late husband.

Appointment of the committee by Commander Edward Culp came after William E. Knox and Albert Wolford told Legionnaires of present plans for the coming year and their hope that a play center be developed that can be used by grownups and the junior police.

The board also heard C. A. Jacobson, Lancaster, who said he represented the General Diesel company, outline plans to establish a diesel engine manufacturing plant in Gettysburg, but took no action on his request that the chamber assist in raising funds for the plant.

Mr. Jacobson told the directors that he had the machinery and parts for a Diesel factory in stor-

Coroner's Jury Blames Simmons And Staley For Humpert's Hammer-Death

Ray H. Simmons or Robert L. Staley "or both of them" were named by an Adams county coroner's jury Monday afternoon as the slayers of Herbert L. Humpert, 70, bachelor Tyrone township farmer, who was fatally beaten while his home was burglarized the night of March 24.

Handcuffed to Sheriff to John E. Millhimes and his deputy, Blaine E. Bixler, the men accused of Humpert's murder sat through the one-hour inquest displaying mild interest in the proceedings and had nothing to say after the verdict was read. Both were returned to solitary confinement at the county jail.

Each was given an opportunity by Coroner Dr. C. G. Crist to make a statement but their attorneys quickly announced the defendants had nothing to say. E. V. Bulleit, court-appointed counsel for Staley, spoke for his client and Richard A. Brown responded when Simmons was asked whether he wished to testify.

Only a handful of curious, including several court house officials and employees, were on hand for the inquest that was held in the court room. The testimony was completed in 45 minutes and 13 minutes later the jury of six men returned the verdict.

Only three witnesses testified. Each was questioned briefly by Doctor Crist and District Attorney J. Francis Yake with an occasional question from the jury box.

Exhibit Sturdy Hammer

The witnesses were Spencer McKinney, the neighbor who discovered Humpert's body the evening of March 26; Dr. C. H. Johnson, Warner hospital pathologist, who conducted the autopsy on the body the following day, and Corp. Lodwick Jenkins who headed the state police investigation of the murder.

The only exhibit shown the jury was a sturdy claw hammer that Corporal Jenkins told the jurors had been identified by Staley as the weapon used in the attack on Humpert. The hammer was taken from Conewago creek at Twin Bridges where Staley told the authorities he had thrown it. It was an unusually heavy tool of its type with part of its 13-inch shaft made of steel.

The coroner's jury placed the time of death at "about 11 p. m. on March 24" and listed the cause of death as "multiple lacerations of the face and scalp, a depressed fracture of the skull and intercranial hemorrhage."

Both Men Blamed

The injuries "were inflicted and the death of the said Herbert L. Humpert was caused by the blows on his head inflicted by a claw hammer in the hands of Ray H. Simmons or Robert L. Staley, or both of them."

On the jury were Frank L. Mumper, David C. Weller, H. M. Oyer, James A. Aumen, Charles B. Dougherty and Hugh C. McIlhenny, the foreman, who read the verdict.

Mr. McKinney, a Penn Ceramic employee, was the first witness. From his home 200 yards from the Humpert residence, McKinney said he had a view of the Humpert house. He told of having been aroused "after 11:30 p. m. the night of March 24" by the sound of a racing motor of an automobile. When he looked out the window, he saw a car's lights between his lane and the Humpert lane but the car soon disappeared and he did not investigate until Wednesday evening after he and Mrs. McKinney had failed to notice Mr. Humpert about his property.

Was "Almost Blind"

McKinney said Mr. Humpert was "almost blind." He described things as he found them at the barn, in his (Please Turn to Page 8)

CITES GROWTH OF MURPHY CO. TO ROTARIANS

The growth of the G. C. Murphy company form one store in McKeesport in 1906 to 209 stores at the present time was outlined Monday evening by C. O. Schweizer, manager of the local store at the regular meeting of the Rotary club Monday night at the YWCA.

From 1906 to 1911, when the present company was formed, 12 stores had been established, Schweizer said. Sales in the 12 stores totalled about $251,000. Now with 209 stores in 12 states the annual volume of business is about $110,000,000.

The original office at McKeesport was above one of the original stores. Now the main office has more than 300 employees and several additional offices are needed. The Murphy company's main warehouse at McKeesport handles over one million dollars worth of merchandise per week, he said.

Carry 30,000 Items

Stores carry about 30,000 items in 40 departments, he added, and the company maintains its own style center and testing departments. In its testing sections competitive merchandise is tested with Murphy products to determine which is the better. Chapter 24
During the next day Jeff's eyes sought Linda's often. Each time she met his gaze frankly, a slight enigmatic smile playing at the corners of her mouth. He found himself watching her almost in desperation, hoping some expression, some gesture might betray an emotion which she was attempting to conceal. She gave no sign of anything but friendship, and by the morning of the following day he had succumbed to a morose rebellious mood.
He couldn't speak to her now, but by the Great Horn Spoon as soon as his affairs were settled he'd get some sort of an answer!
He caught himself watching her hands as they kneaded dough, saw them move swiftly to snatch a box of matches from Mephisto's inquiring nose, curve with gentle strength to prop her father up in bed, move with decisive surety to saddle her mare. Strong, capable, yet curiously feminine hands. Just the right sort of hands for the wife of a prospective cattle man.
In sheer disgust at himself Jeff went off to the mine and struck large chunks of mineral specimens from the walls. He no longer cared if someone inside Coulter's tunnel heard him. Let them come! If they wanted to fight this was the right place for it and they'd find four years in the Army had made him as good a marksman as anyone they could put up. But Coulter's tunnel was almost ominously silent.
He returned to the adobe and compared the rock sample with those in the cardboard box. They were from the same strata. There was no longer any doubt that the Irskine land was valuable.
Jeff paced restlessly up and down the yard, lighting one cigarette from another and wearing a path in the dust under the shadow of the cottonwood.
Why hadn't he heard from Gentry? Surely the man had had time to make certain of his suspicions. He tossed pebbles at Mephisto and frowned.
What action should he take? Tax time was here again—he'd have to do something one way or the other. He could stay on his land, sleeping with his Winchester '22 beside him and challenging Coulter when he came to collect the Hardy's rent.
That way lay trouble.
The Hardys were innocent bystanders in his whole affair even though their sympathies were with him. He did not want them involved in a gun fight with Coulter's outfit.
The other alternative was to go into Tucson or Phoenix and engage a lawyer. That meant a long drawn-out legal battle which would probably use up most of his savings. If the minerals in the ridge ran deep enough, it would pay him to follow the latter course, but it also meant a year or more of his life and a delayed start in his dream of cattle breeding.
For a while, Linda sitting on the old wooden bench under the tree knitting a sweater for her father, watched Jeff anxiously. At last she arose and, falling into step beside him, put her hand on his arm.
"Jeff, I think I know what's going through your mind. I'm sure everything will work out."
Almost unconsciously he put his fingers over hers.
"I wish I were."
"Maybe Mr. Gentry will help you."
"Why should he? He's really not involved in any way except that he's interested in buying or leasing this land and mining it."
"Well, if he believes in you he won't deal with Coulter. He'll want to keep his own skirts clean and that means helping you prove your title."
Jeff turned suddenly, staring into her face.
"Do you believe in me, Linda?"
"Color flooded her cheeks. Of course I do, Jeff."
"Enough to—
"Enough to what?"
The pupils of her eyes had grown enormous. He felt her body tremble slightly beside him and his hand gripped hers fiercely, then as suddenly released it.
"Oh hell, Linda. I haven't the right to speak now."
Her eyes clouded with disappointment. There was no denying it and Jeff felt a sudden swift elation.
"Jeff, haven't you heard? There's no time like the present!"
He grinned, his relief filling him with a strange exhilaration.
"Yes, and I've also heard 'Speak in haste and repent at leisure!'"
"You've got that wrong, it's marry in haste."
He chuckled. "Well?"
Her face was fiery now and thoroughly confused. "I'm afraid I misunderstood you."
The strident blast of an automobile horn made them both spin around. "Well, talk it over later," Jeff promised. There's Monica! The little fool, she ought to be in bed!"
Impatiently Monica's hand came down on the horn again. It was quite evident that she didn't mind getting out of the car. Linda's lips were compressed. "You'd better go to her, Jeff, it's you she wants to see!"
He shot her a puzzled glance then walked over to the station wagon. Except for a reasonable palor Monica looked well. She smiled implicitly.
"Hello. Why the gloomy Sunday countenance?"
"You shouldn't be traipsing around the country so soon."
Monica laughed delightedly. "I'm tougher than you think."
"So is a rattlesnake bite."
"Skip it, Doctor Irskine, I'm OK now. I merely dropped by to thank you for saving my life. . . it sort of slipped my mind the other day."
"Don't tell me you drove over here just to say that?"
"Mind reader. No I didn't. Dad gave me a message for you—said to tell you he had fired Ransom Fawcett. He said you'd understand about it."
Jeff's fingers tightened on the door handle.
"Yes," he said slowly. "I do understand, but it's a wonder—seems to me I've been pretty backward in my thinking lately."
Chapter 25
Ransom Fawcett!
As the station wagon was obliterated by its swirling self-created cloud of dust, Jeff stood watching, hands on hips, his lean jaws working as he muttered softly to himself.
The fragments of the puzzle were falling into place.
Ransom Fawcett, Gentry's secretary, playing the role of informant! How willfully blind Jeff had been not to suspect that very thing when there had been so many sign posts pointing in that direction.
Now it all became clear.
Fawcett working hand in glove with Coulter to persuade Gentry to buy Jeff's land. He was probably to receive a fat commission on the sale.
Fawcett safely planted in Gentry's household where he was included in or could overhear any conversation that took place.
Fawcett wheedling Jeff to talk with Gentry out of the copper magnate word by word and sneaking to Coulter with the important fact that Amos Larabee was the one witness to the sale of Irskine land.
Fawcett, the groveling sycophant, accepting a salary from Gentry and trying to cheat him at every turn. He was worse than Coulter because he risked no danger himself yet wittingly accepted the position as intermediary to bring about brutal murder of an innocent old man.
Jeff kicked at a stone and sent it scrapping across the yard. He turned heading for the stable. Linda came to him and put her hand on his arm.
"Jeff, what is it?"
"I'm going into town and give a man the whipping of his life."
Her face blanched, he felt her fingers pressing into his flesh.
"What did Monica say?"
He told her about Fawcett and she shook her head. "Don't go, Jeff, it will just bring trouble. They may even be waiting for you."
He undid her fingers gently.
"Amos was an old man, Linda; maybe he was ready to die, I don't know—but he wasn't ready to die in that manner and he did it for me. I'm the only one who can avenge him now."
Her lips were dry and she moistened them with the tip of her tongue.
"Maybe Fawcett has already left town. Maybe someone else already has beaten him up."
"Why?"
"Don't you see, Jeff? He's no good to Coulter now. In fact, his being fired proves to Coulter that both you and Mr. Gentry have a pretty good idea of what's taken place. Now Fawcett is just a menace—he can't be of any further use to Coulter but as long as he's around he's a continual threat."
Jeff nodded slowly.
"Coulter will either kill him or pay his way out of town. That's why I've got to get into McCloud fast. . . Fawcett has a lesson coming to him—he's the kind of rat who only learns by physical punishment."
"Jeff, I have no right to ask it, but please don't go."
"I'm sorry, Linda."
Her erect figure seemed to grow even straighter, her nostrils flared.
"Jeff Irskine, if you go in there now, I'll never forgive you!"
A thin sardonic smile twisted his lips; his eyes met her steadily. "This is my business, Linda. Without saying anything more he walked around to the stables and saddled Star.
It was mid afternoon, the hottest part of the day. McCloud seemed almost a ghost town. Those who were not employed at the Gentry mines sought relief from the sun behind drawn blinds. A few heat-impatient Mexicans dozed in the palm-shaded plaza, shading their siesta hour with a pack of rangel mongrel dogs who continually roamed the town.
Jeff rode directly to Coulter's office. A thrill of relief and anger went through him when he saw Coulter and Fawcett seated inside. The trucking man scowled as Jeff entered but made no effort to move. His face was red and belligerent and Jeff guessed that the two had been arguing. Fawcett looked pale and tense, he got to his feet nervously when Jeff moved toward him and reached for his handkerchief to mop his face. His restless eyes went to Coulter as though begging him to stand by him, but the seated man refused to meet his gaze.
"Fawcett," Jeff said, "come outside. I'm going to teach you a les-

MARINES CLEAR
AREA AROUND
ATTACK SCENE

Tientsin, April 7 (P)—The Chinese government today ordered evacuation of all residents within 1,000 yards of the marine ammunition dump at Hsinho, where a surprise Communist attack Friday night killed five Americans. A marine request to extend U. S. defense lines to that radius was approved.
A Chinese official meanwhile gave the first detailed story of the Red assault as he said Maj. Gen. Samuel Howard, commander of marines in North China, described it to him.
Two marines were on guard at the entrance to the sprawling, triangular dump. They were killed in the first Red attack from the dark.
Chased By Chinese
Three other marines rushed in a jeep to aid their comrades and likewise were killed.
The stored munitions were mostly heavy artillery shells but the raiders loaded some of them on pack animals. They escaped with some shells and blew up some ammunition before they withdrew.
Approximately 80 marine reinforcements were summoned from Tangku, five miles away. Land mines and a road ambush delayed them and wounded 18, but all are believed recovering.
A Chinese government battalion went after the Communist raiders, who left six of their number dead and were believed to have approximately 100 wounded.

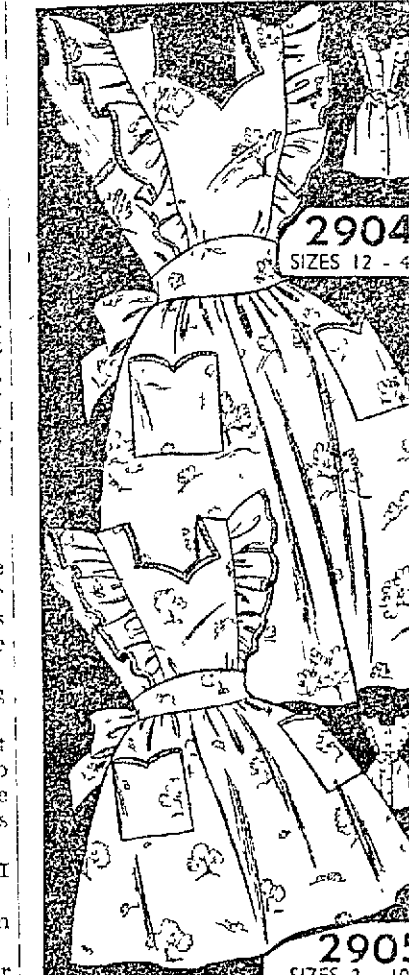

Harrisburg, April 7 (P)—The federal-state flood forecasting service reported today that the Susquehanna river was falling or beginning to fall throughout its watershed today after a week-end rise that sent the stream out of its banks in some districts.

son before you leave McCloud. I imagine that's your intention."
Fresh perspiration filmed the other man's face, he appeared to wilt in his expensive well-cut clothes as though the oppressive heat of the afternoon had suddenly hit him.
"I don't know what you're talking about, Irskine."
"I think you do, but to put it plainly, I'm going to beat you up because you're responsible for the death of a fine old man—Amos Larabee."
"You've made a mistake. I didn't kill him, it was—"
"Shut up!" Coulter spoke through clenched teeth.
Jeff took Fawcett by the collar of his coat and jerked him out into the street. He pushed him off the high sidewalk into the dust. It was shaded now by the false facade of Coulter's office and the other small stores lining the street.
Coulter came to the doorway and stood watching, his metallic eyes gleaming with anticipation. When Fawcett shot him an appealing glance, he grinned nastily.
"All right, Fawcett, defend yourself," Jeff said coldly.
It was no match. As far as height and weight went Jeff and Fawcett were even but the secretary's muscles were soft. He struck out blindly. After a few preliminary punches Jeff knocked him old. He dropped him against the curb and threw water from the horse trough into his face.
Coulter's heavy brows lifted lightly.
"Nice work, Irskine, you saved me some trouble."
"Don't get the idea I'll settle my business with you this way, Coulter, but when I get through with you, you'll wish I had."
He mounted Star and turned the gelding's head toward home.

DeGaulle Calls For Support Of French

Strasbourg, France, April 7 (P)—Gen. DeGaulle called on the French people today to organize themselves into what would amount to a political party supporting him and his ideas. He said this would prevent a dictatorship, anarchy or overthrow of "the independence of the state."
It was the former provisional president's frankest bid for return to political power and came a day after he had declared that, should a new tyranny menace the world, "the United States and France will stand together in opposing it."
DeGaulle told a crowd of 60,000 massed in front of the city hall that he believed the new constitution should be revised to provide for a strong executive.
At one point in his address, DeGaulle declared: "America and Russia are automatically rivals, though one has the right to hope they will not become enemies."

Wine Flows Today
In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, April 7 (P)—Wine literally flowed in a street today.
Joseph Stockley, of Philadelphia, told police he swerved his loaded truck in an attempt to avoid an automobile. The truck overturned, breaking every bottle in the cargo of red wine bound for New York.
Traffic was rerouted for an hour and a half while repair crews mopped the wine into sewers and cleaned up the broken glass.

Phone, Coal Crises
Depress Stock Mart

New York, April 7 (P)—The telephone strike and widespread coal mine stoppages throughout the nation depressed today's stock market to a moderate degree.
While liquidation was light from the start, leading steels, motors, and rails slipped as much as $1 or more a share. American telephone in early dealing was off better than $1 at a new 1947 low.

Tokyo, April 7 (P)—A strong vote of confidence for General MacArthur and a distinct repudiation to left wing labor leaders appeared evident today in the unexpectedly convincing conservative victory for governorship of Tokyo prefecture.

while enroute to high school with the high school youngsters.

Walters will then pick up the children from grades five to eight at Glenwood and discharge them at Church school before continuing to the high school.

Charles McCadden's route will continue to cover the same territory as before but McCadden will be asked to secure a large school bus instead of a passenger car now in use. He will continue to discharge grade one to four students at Glenwood and then take fifth to eighth grade students to Church school. At Church he will pick up the one to four students there and return with them to Glenwood.

The office of the county superintendent of schools, queried on the action of the Highland township board, expressed pleasure on the motion this morning and added that as a result of its action the board will be doubling its educational system's efficiency at a cost of only a few dollars. Greatest advantage of graded schools, the county office pointed out, is that the students immediately get twice as much time per grade.

Some Extra Cost

Some additional expenditure will have to be made for transportation but the state pays 81 per cent of the cost in Highland township. The board also plans to purchase some additional teaching equipment because of the increased time available per grade and some furnishings will have to be transferred between the two schools.

Rural districts so far which have re-graded schools are Berwick, Conewago, Franklin, Menallen, Mt. Joy, Oxford and now Highland, the county office said. It was also added that among the other districts which will be faced with problems of reorganization for next year because they have less than 30 students per school include: Cumberland, Freedom, Germany, Hamilton, Hamiltonban, Huntingdon, Latimore, Mt. Pleasant, Tyrone and Union townships.

of an idea for a cheap automobile and an initial capital investment of $28,000.

Ardent Pacifist
That was in 1903, and at his death, the great empire belonged exclusively to his family and had manufactured more than 31,000,000 vehicles.

Ford returned only a week ago from his annual visit to the Ford estate in Georgia and was said to have been in excellent health at that time. He had been planning to celebrate his wife's birthday and their 50th wedding anniversary next Friday.

The passing of the elder Ford ended a career that had many facets. He was an ardent pacifist, a prohibitionist, deeply interested in sociology and in the development of agriculture as an adjunct to industry.

Ford, who abhorred war, once tried to stop the first world conflict with a peace ship expedition to Europe, designed to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." It was a failure that cost Ford $400,000.

Thomas Bosserman and Arnel Bosserman, both at home.

Mrs. Ira W. Kane
Mrs. Minnie Iretta Kane, 72, wife of Ira William Kane, Chambersburg, died Saturday at 8:40 p. m. at her home after an illness of three months.

She was born March 23, 1875, at Edenville, and was the daughter of the late Hezekiah and Susan Beauph Miller. She was a member of the Edenville United Brethren church.

Surviving, besides her husband, are two daughters and three sons: Mrs. Laura S. Leedy, of Gettysburg, R. 3; Miss Stella M. Kane, of Washington; Edison M. Kane, Levi L. Kane, and Ray F. complaint that Carroll M. Zentz, proprietor of a used lot at Carlisle and Railroad streets, had erected a fence two feet over the borough property line. A proposal to purchase a lawnmower for the sewage disposal plant was referred to the sewer committee.

Borough Engineer Winebrenner was authorized to make repairs to the borough shed and a sidewalk on Railroad street.

To Lay Sewer Line

The engineer was also given authority to place a sewer line in a new street to be known as Highland avenue, near the Warner hospital. Winebrenner reported that it would be easier and cheaper to install the sewer before the street is graded and ordained. Permits have been issued by the burgess for ten houses on the street, located in the southwest section of the borough.

Winebrenner was also given permission to use the road scraper and a truck in fitting up a vacant lot for a baseball diamond for the junior police. Council authorized payment of $10 a month to Robert Johnson for cleaning the police offices. A letter from the Chamber of Commerce urging that the borough improve its snow removal methods next year was tabled. Council, which recently authorized Chief of Police

Robert C. Harpster to attend an FBI school in Washington, was informed that Harpster has withdrawn his application for the school. It was explained that the chief would be unable to enter a class this year and that he felt that he had had all the training that the Washington school could provide.

A month ago council received a letter from Dr. A. R. Wentz, president of the Lutheran Theological seminary, asking that the street's name be changed because it conflicted with "Seminary Avenue" on which the seminary property is located.

A suggestion from Councilman Hummelbaugh that the borough purchase an automatic street sweeper was referred to the highway committee.

Burgess Heiges reported fees collected as follows, during March: five building permits, $16; two theatre license fees, $10; one sewer permit, 75 cents; fees on 39,396 theatre admissions, $601.07; double parking fine, $1; obstructing traffic fine, $1, and 191 meter violations, $101.

MACK LIKES HIS FIRST LOOK AT TOUTED ROOKIE

Savannah, Ga., April 8 (AP)—Fain, the highly touted rookie with the jumping kneecap has finally done something for Connie Mack besides smile.

The venerable owner-manager of the Philadelphia Athletics was quite relieved as Fain made his first start of the training season a Grade A performance.

"It's no joke when you have a player who has got to be your first baseman and all you've ever seen him do is smile," Connie commented. The kid from San Francisco, reported by those who saw him play in the minors as a sure bet to make the major league grade, had been sidelined with a trick kneecap since the first day of the training season.

Minor League Record

A quick glance at Fain's minor league record reveals why Mack says this 24-year-old first baseman "has got to be" the A's initial sacker. In 180 games with San Francisco of the Pacific coast league, Fain made 185 base hits and collected 129 base on balls to establish a record of being on base 50 per cent of the 615 times he went to bat. Fain knocked in 112 runs while hitting .301. Defensively he participated in or completed 148 double plays.

Mack said Fain has been begging him to turn him loose, "but I think I did right lettin' that knee take its own time to play ball."

"It's been hard waiting to see him in action. I guess Fain's about the fourth or fifth best recommended player I ever took on without knowing anything about him personally. Then I have to sit a month waiting to get a look."

Does All Right

In his first appearance against Toronto in the A's farewell game at their West Palm Beach training site, Fain started two double plays; was hit-and-run man on another; was charged with one out; failed to hit in three tries but bunted in a man who that drew a wild throw and admitted Sam Chapman with a run that could not be sneezed at in a ball game the A's won 3-2.

Connie surveyed Fain's deportment for the day and generously commented:

"That's about as much as I ever ask of a fella his first time out."

BABE RUTH TO HELP HIS KIDS

New York, April 8 (AP)—Babe Ruth is coming back to baseball—not to the organized leagues but to serve as "consultant" to the American Legion junior baseball program which this year expects to enroll more than a million boys.

The former home run king, who leaves today for two weeks of "resting and fishing" in Florida, yesterday made his first public appearance since undergoing a serious neck operation last Jan. 6 to sign a contract for the job.

The scene was somewhat reminiscent of the occasion 20 years ago when the big boy signed with the Yankees at $80,000 a year. The newsman, radio people and newsreel cameras were there to record the event, but it was a different Babe and a different contract this time.

Tanned from sun baths but nevertheless haggard from the long hospital siege that began last November, his hair showed streaks of gray.

Nodding to the baseball writers, he said "they know how I feel about kids. I love kids. They're the cause of me getting as far as I did. Naturally, they couldn't swing that bat for me, but their encouragement put me up so high. I'm getting pretty old now, but I want to do what I can for them."

Writers Vote Dodds Outstanding Runner

New York, April 8 (AP)—Gil Dodds, the rambling reverend who out-classed the opposition in 12 straight indoor successes, has been voted by the Track Writers Association as the outstanding performer of the winter campaign.

The second runner to take the award twice since it was instituted in 1941, the Boston A.A. miler boasts the four fastest miles ever run on standard-sized tracks, he also won three races at two miles, the season's record boosting his string to 23 straight since he was last beaten on boards in the K. of C. mile in 1943.

The ancient Incas were the first men to make a relief map.

Bears Lose Bruce, Out With Injury

Pittsburgh, April 8 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Hornets, victorious in their last 15 home games, will attempt to run the string to 16 tonight in the fourth game of their playoff series with the Hershey Bears for the American hockey league championship.

Eleven of the triumphs came in the regular season, four in the playoffs.

Sporting a two-to-one advantage in the title play, the Hornets will have an enhanced chance of pushing the count to three-to-one because of the probable absence of Gordie Bruce, the Bears' high-scoring right wing.

Bruce was injured in a rush toward the cage in the second game at Hershey last Thursday and complained of kidney pains over the weekend.

Gus Bodnar, Hornet right wing, has completely recovered from a shoulder injury suffered in the semifinal series. Elwyn Morris, defense man who was cut about the mouth Saturday, also will be ready to start.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 8 (AP)—There isn't much fun in blasting the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, since that august organization already has been on the receiving end of more verbal punches than even Happy Chandler.

But it does seem strange that the USLTA is reported ready to declare Pauline Betz ineligible for doing no more than thinking about turning professional—and for failing to provide an immediate answer to cable "charges" that she has such a move in mind.

In off-the-record conversations, association officials will admit freely that their main objection to pro tennis is that it might ruin the gate receipts for the amateur championships. . . . But so far no one has seen them declaring, for instance, that the West Side Tennis club is insatiable because it allows a pro tournament to be held in the Forest Hills stadium and Schuyler Van Bloem, one of the club's bigwigs, is actively associated with the pro game. . . . During the war years Miss Betz probably was the best gate attraction at the amateur championships, so why not give her a chance, at least, to make up her mind?

YEAH, HAMS

Jim Coogan, Penn State college tub thumper writes: "The Epstein boys, who used to box for Leo Houck at Penn State, were the first State alumni to write a Broadway play, now another Penn State alumnus is on Broadway with a play, The Whole World Over. His name is Paul Moss, and he's the gent who managed Billy Soose during his rise to professional ring fame." . . . The fight game and show business may have more in common than we think.

SHORTS AND SHELLS

Dr. Carey Middlecoff, the golfing ex-dentist, explains that one reason for turning pro when he did was that if he played on the Walker cup team there'd be pressure on him to wait until after the national amateur; then there'd be more pressure because next year's amateur is to be played in Memphis, Tenn., his home town. . . . Bernie Mayer, New York U. shot-putter, has been tossing the 16-pound ball around 43 feet with his left hand and 50 with his right. Coach Emil von Elting figures Bernie could break the both-hands record if someone would put on the event for him.

DICK METZ ASKS PROBE OF FIGHT

Atlanta, April 7 (AP)—President Ed Dudley of the Professional Golfers Association has been asked to investigate the altercation last winter between Dick Metz and Fred Corcoran, PGA tournament manager.

The request came from Metz himself, a veteran of 20 years on the gold circuit, who floored Corcoran with a single punch in California. Corcoran has charged the blow was a "sneak attack."

In a telegram to Dudley, Metz said Corcoran "has stated and it was widely publicized that I struck a foul blow. He has also provided newspaper writers with information upon which stories were published criticizing my war record."

"As a result of this I have been given a bad name to the newspaper reading public who are unacquainted with me. x x x I want an opportunity to prove that I did not, as charged by your official, strike any inference that my war record a 'foul blow' and that the records of my draft board will prove that is open to criticism is false."

AMENDMENTS TO GAME LAWS BEING URGED

Harrisburg, April 8 (AP)—A legislative committee today reported "dissatisfaction" has been expressed by hunters with the present practice of declaring an antlerless deer season without an open hearing on the controversial question.

It recommended that the game law be amended to provide that a public hearing be held by the state Game Commission in the county affected before an open antlerless deer season can be set.

The recommendation was part of a report by the joint state government (research) commission's committee on the Fish and Game Commissions, authorized by the 1945 Legislature.

The two-year inquiry, led by Rep. George A. Goodling (R.-York) and Sen. Montgomery F. Crowe (R.-Monroe), included conferences with officials of both Game and Fish Commissions and with various sportsmen's organizations.

Would Change Fines
The report also recommended that field collections of fines from game violations be prohibited by an amendment to the game law requiring that information for such violation be filed before a local justice of the peace or alderman.

Other recommendations included: That earmarking of 75 cents of the resident hunter's license for purchase of land be eliminated and the money go into the general game fund.

That the non-resident hunter's fee remain at $15 for small game but be increased to $25 for large game.

Increase In Fees
Establishment of a fur trapper's license at $2, plus 10 cents for the issuing agent, but excluding any person under 16 years who sets 15 traps or less.

That resident fishing licenses be increased by 50 cents.

Both the Game and Fish Commissions also received commendations in the report for "excellent work" in game and fish propagation efforts.

A measure increasing the fishing license fee from $1.50 to $2 was passed 34-14 by the Senate last night and sent to the House. The bill allocated 25 cents of the increase for development of trout streams, research and building of fishing dams.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)
Forth Worth, Tex., April 8 (AP)—Outfielder Bill Nicholson of the Chicago Cubs, who suffered a muscle injury in Oakland, Calif., two weeks ago, had a recurrence of his injury while acting as a pinch-hitter and is on his way to Chicago today to await the Cubs' arrival at the windy city.

The injury, in his right leg, has responded to treatment but the trouble has persisted. Meanwhile, veteran Stan Hack is out of action with a stomach misery after loading up on too much seafood.

Little Rock, Ark., April 8 (AP)—Manager Ted Lyons of the Chicago White Sox will pause with his "A" squad here today long enough for a workout and to visit "Red" Ruffing, who hurt the knee he broke last summer while pitching for the New York Yankees. The 42-year old right hander was sent here ahead of the squad for x-rays and treatment.

Dallas, Tex., April 8 (AP)—Some fielding practice is indicated for St. Louis Cardinals who have made 14 errors in their last five games. The Red Birds committed three miscues while drubbing Houston 7-2 yesterday but these were offset by three double plays. Stan Musial hit his third homer of the spring season for the Birds.

St. Louis, April 8 (AP)—General Manager Bill Devitt of the St. Louis Browns said upon his return from the club's spring training camp that he was pleased with what he saw.

"The ball club is hustling," he said. "The boys are getting on base and they are running, and they don't stop running. It's a different looking team than you saw last season. I think the fans are going to be pleasantly surprised with this 1947 club."

Augusta, Ga., April 8 (AP)—Ben Chapman, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, today disclaimed all knowledge of Branch Rickey's reported five-player offer for Outfielder Del Ennis.

The Brooklyn Dodgers president was said to have offered Catcher Howell, Pitchers Hank Behrman and Ed Head; infielder Stan Rokjek and Outfielder Carl Furillo for the Phil's sophomore gardener. Rickey estimated the five players' combined value at $300,000.

Chapman said, however, he had received a more attractive offer for Ennis at the Los Angeles meeting of the Major and Minor leagues last December.

Savannah, Ga., April 8 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics doled 13 players to farm clubs in their biggest player slash this spring.

Eddie Mattson, 195-pound catcher who butted 355 for the Harrisburg interstate league club last year, was shipped to Birmingham of the southern association. Pitcher Mason Bowes and Second Baseman John Jordan were sent to Martinsville of the Carolina league. Ten players were assigned to the Savannah Sally league team.

Two others—Outfielder Frank McGuire and Pitcher John Van Wyck—journeyed northward to consult their parents before joining the A's farm system. McGuire, who hit two home runs in one spring contest, went to his South Orange, N. J., home while Van Wyck traveled to Staten Island, N. Y.

Those sent to Savannah were: Lou Brissie, Cal McIrvine, Jim Reidy and George Kemp, Hank Biasatti, Ike Nance, Bill Hockenberry and Joe Masaro, infielders; Ed Boehm, outfielder, and Joe Astroth, catcher.

MAC KEE'S FIRST LOOK AT OUTED ROOKIE

Savannah, Ga., April 8 (AP)—Fain, the highly touted rookie to the jumping kneecap has finally made something for Connie Mack's side.

The venerable owner-manager of the Philadelphia Athletics was quite pleased as Fain made his first start in the training season a Grade A performance.

"It's no joke when you have a player who has got to be your first baseman and all you've ever seen in do is smile," Connie commented. The kid from San Francisco, reported by those who saw him play in the minors as a sure bet to make the major league grade, had been delinquent with a trick kneecap since the first day of the training season.

Minor League Record
A quick glance at Fain's minor league record reveals why Mack types this 24-year-old first baseman as "got to be" the A's initial sacker. In 180 games with San Francisco of the Pacific coast league, Fain led 185 base hits and collected 29 base on balls to establish a record of being on base 50 per cent of the 615 times he went to bat. Fain knocked in 112 runs while hitting .301. Defensively he participated in or completed 148 double plays.

Mack said Fain has been begging him to turn him loose, "but I think I'd better wait until he can take his own time to play ball."

"It's been hard waiting to see him in action. I guess Fain's about the fourth or fifth best recommended player I ever took on without knowing anything about him personally. Then I have to sit a month waiting to get a look."

Does All Right
In his first appearance against Toronto in the A's farewell game at their West Palm Beach training site, Fain started two double plays, was hit-end man on another, was charged with one out; failed to hit in three tries but bunted in a man who threw a wild throw and admitted Sam Chapman with a run that could not be sneezed at in a ball game the A's won 3-2.

Connie surveyed Fain's performance for the day and generously commented:

"That's about as much as I ever ask of a fella his first time out."

BABE RUTH TO HELP HIS KIDS

New York, April 8 (AP)—Babe Ruth is coming back to baseball—not to the organized leagues but to serve as "consultant" to the American Legion junior baseball program which this year expects to enroll more than a million boys.

The former home run king, who leaves today for two weeks of "resting and fishing" in Florida, yesterday made his first public appearance since undergoing a serious neck operation last Jan. 6 to sign a contract for the job.

The scene was somewhat reminiscent of the occasion 20 years ago when the big boy signed with the Yanks at $80,000 a year. The newsman, radio people and newsreel cameras were there to record the event, but it was a different Babe and a different contract this time.

Tanned from sun baths but nevertheless haggard from the long hospital siege that began last November, his hair showed streaks of gray.

Nodding to the baseball writers, he said "they know how I feel about kids. I love kids. They're the cause of me getting as far as I did. Naturally, they couldn't swing that bat for me, but their encouragement put me up so high. I'm getting pretty old now, but I want to do what I can for them."

Writers Vote Dodds Outstanding Runner

New York, April 8 (AP)—Gil Dodds, the rambling reverend who out-clasped the opposition in 12 straight indoor successes, has been voted by the Track Writers Association as the outstanding performer of the winter campaign.

The second runner to take the award twice since it was instituted in 1941, the Boston A.A. Miller boasts the four fastest miles ever run on standard-sized tracks, he also won three races at two miles, the season's record boosting his string to 23 straight since he was last beaten on boards in the K. of C. mile in 1943.

Bears Lose Bruce, Out With Injury

Pittsburgh, April 8 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Hornets, victorious in their last 15 home games, will attempt to run the string to 16 tonight in the fourth game of their playoff series with the Hershey Bears for the American hockey league championship.

Eleven of the triumphs came in the regular season, four in the playoffs.

Sporting a two-to-one advantage in the title play, the Hornets will have an enhanced chance of pushing the count to three-to-one because of the probable absence of Gordie Bruce, the Bears' high-scoring right wing.

Bruce was injured in a rush toward the cage in the second game at Hershey last Thursday and complained of kidney pains over the weekend.

Gus Bodnar, Hornet right wing, has completely recovered from a shoulder injury suffered in the semifinal series. Elwyn Morris, defense man who was cut about the mouth Saturday, also will be ready to start.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 8 (AP)—There isn't much fun in blasting the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, since that august organization already has been on the receiving end of more verbal punches than even Happy Chandler.

But it does seem strange that the USLTA is reported ready to declare Pauline Betz ineligible for doing no more than thinking about turning professional—and for failing to provide an immediate answer to cabled "charges" that she has such a move in mind.

In off-the-record conversations, association officials will admit freely that their main objection to pro tennis is that it might ruin the game receipts for the amateur championships. . . . But so far no one has seen them declaring, for instance, that the West Side Tennis club is insubstantial because it allows a pro tournament to be held in the Forest Hills stadium and Schuyler Van Bloem, one of the club's bigwigs, is actively associated with the pro game. . . . During the war years Miss Betz probably was the best gate attraction at the amateur championships, so why not give her a chance, at least, to make up her mind?

YEAH, HAMS

Jim Coogan, Penn State college tub thumper writes: "The Epstein boys, who used to box for Leo Houck at Penn State, were the first State alumni to write a Broadway play, now another Penn State alumnus is on Broadway with a play, The Whole World Over. His name is Paul Moss, and he's the gent who managed Billy Soose during his rise to professional ring fame." . . . The fight game and show business may have more in common than we think.

SHORTS AND SHELLS

Dr. Carey Middlecott, the golfing ex-dentist, explains that one reason for turning pro when he did was that if he played on the Walker cup team there'd be pressure on him to wait until after the national amateur; then there'd be more pressure because next year's amateur is to be played in Memphis, Tenn., his home town. . . . Bernie Mayer, New York U. shot-putter, has been tossing the 16-pound ball around 43 feet with his left hand and 50 with his right. Coach Emil von Elting figures Bernie could break the both-hands record if someone would put on the event for him.

DICK METZ ASKS PROBE OF FIGHT

Atlanta, April 7 (AP)—President Ed Dudley of the Professional Golfers Association has been asked to investigate the altercation last winter between Dick Metz and Fred Corcoran, PGA tournament manager.

The request came from Metz himself, a veteran of 20 years on the gold circuit, who floored Corcoran with a single punch in California. Corcoran has charged the blow was a "sneak attack."

In a telegram to Dudley, Metz said Corcoran "has stated and it was widely publicized that I struck a foul blow. He has also provided newspaper writers with information upon which stories were published criticizing my war record."

"As a result of this I have been given a bad name to the newspaper reading public who are unacquainted with me. x x x I want an opportunity to prove that I did not, as charged by your official, strike any inference that my war record a 'foul blow' and that the records of my draft board will prove that is open to criticism is false."

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 8 (AP)—Anthracite industry operations returned to normal today following the Easter shutdown.

Work notices were posted by several collieries yesterday but the mine workers held to their annual custom of observing Easter Monday.

AMENDMENTS TO GAME LAWS BEING URGED

Harrisburg, April 8 (AP)—A legislative committee today reported "dissatisfaction" has been expressed by hunters with the present practice of declaring an antlerless deer season without an open hearing on the controversial question.

It recommended that the game law be amended to provide that a public hearing be held by the state Game Commission in the county affected before an open antlerless deer season can be set.

The recommendation was part of a report by the joint state government (research) commission's committee on the Fish and Game Commissions, authorized by the 1945 Legislature.

The two-year inquiry, led by Rep. George A. Goodling (R-York) and Sen. Montgomery F. Crowe (R-Monroe), included conferences with officials of both Game and Fish Commissions and with various sportsmen's organizations.

Would Change Fines
The report also recommended that field collections of fines from game violations be prohibited by an amendment to the game law requiring that information for such violation be filed before a local justice of the peace or alderman.

Other recommendations included: That earmarking of 75 cents of the resident hunter's license for purchase of land be eliminated and the money go into the general game fund.

That the non-resident hunter's fee remain at $15 for small game but be increased to $25 for large game.

Increase In Fees
Establishment of a fur trapper's license at $2, plus 10 cents for the issuing agent, but excluding any person under 16 years who sets 15 traps or less.

That resident fishing licenses be increased by 50 cents.

Both the Game and Fish Commissions also received commendations in the report for "excellent work" in game and fish propagation efforts.

A measure increasing the fishing license fee from $150 to $2 was passed 34-14 by the Senate last night and sent to the House. The bill allocated 25 cents of the increase for development of trout streams, research and building of fishing dams.

Training Camp Briefs

Fort Worth, Tex., April 8 (AP)—Outfielder Bill Nicholson of the Chicago Cubs, who suffered a muscle injury in Oakland, Calif., two weeks ago, had a recurrence of his injury while acting as a pinch-hitter and is on his way to Chicago today to await the Cubs' arrival at the windy city.

The injury, in his right leg, has responded to treatment but the trouble has persisted. Meanwhile, veteran Stan Hack is out of action with a stomach misery after loading up on too much seafood.

Little Rock, Ark., April 8 (AP)—Manager Ted Lyons of the Chicago White Sox will pause with his "A" squad here today long enough for a workout and to visit "Red" Ruffing, who hurt the knee he broke last summer while pitching for the New York Yankees. The 42-year old right hander was sent here ahead of the squad for x-rays and treatment.

Dallas, Tex., April 8 (AP)—Some fielding practice is indicated for St. Louis Cardinals who have made 14 errors in their last five games. The Red Birds committed three miscues while drubbing Houston 7-2 yesterday but these were offset by three double plays. Stan Musial hit his third homer of the spring season for the Birds.

St. Louis, April 8 (AP)—General Manager Bill Dewitt of the St. Louis Browns said upon his return from the club's spring training camp that he was pleased with what he saw. "The ball club is hustling," he said. "The boys are getting on base and they are running, and they don't stop running. It's a different looking team than you saw last season. I think the fans are going to be pleasantly surprised with this 1947 club."

Augusta, Ga., April 8 (AP)—Ben Chapman, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, today disclaimed all knowledge of Branch Rickey's reported five-player offer for Outfielder Del Ennis.

The Brooklyn Dodgers president was said to have offeredatcher Howard, Pitchers Hank Behrman and Ed Head; infielder Stan Rejek and Outfielder Carl Furillo for the Phils' sophomore gardener, Rickey estimated the five players' combined value at $300,000.

Chapman said, however, he had received a more attractive offer for Ennis at the Los Angeles meeting of the Major and Minor leagues last December.

Savannah, Ga., April 8 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics dealt 13 players to farm clubs in their biggest player slash this spring.

Eddie Mutyryn, 195-pound catcher who batted .355 for the Harrisburg interstate league club last year, was shipped to Birmingham of the southern association. Pitcher Mason Bowes and Second Baseman John Jordan were sent to Martinsville of the Carolina league. Ten players were assigned to the Savannah Saily league team.

Two others—Outfielder Frank McGuire and Pitcher John Van Wyck—journeyed northward to consult their parents before joining the A's farm system. McGuire, who hit two home runs in one spring contest, went to his South Orange, N. J., home while Van Wyck traveled to Staten Island, N. Y.

Those sent to Savannah were: Lou Brissie, Cal McIrrvin, Jim Reidy and George Kemp, Hank Biasatti, Ike Nance, Bill Hockenberry and Joe Masaro, infielders; Ed Boehm, outfielder, and Joe Astroth, catcher.

BANK CLOSING, SUNDAY HOCKEY BILLS PASSED

Harrisburg, April 8 (AP)—Measures empowering banks to close on Saturday and local communities to vote on Sunday hockey were passed by the Senate as Republican leaders prepared for a public airing of objections to Gov. James H. Duff's $133,000,000 tax program.

The Saturday Bank Closing bill, sponsored by Senns, Bertram Frazier and John W. Lord (both R-Phila) was adopted by 40-9 despite opposition from rural legislators, while the hockey measure was approved 26-23, a constitutional majority.

The bank measure permits any bank to close all-day Saturday throughout the year if it wishes, Frazier asserting it was necessary in the large cities because of employment problems.

The hockey measure, on the other hand, allows municipalities to hold local referenda on Sunday hockey or ice skating between the hours of 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. It was adopted in the upper branch after Sen. Anthony J. Desilverio (D-Phila) changed his vote in favor of the proposal after first voting against it.

Hearing Tomorrow
Previously, Chairman James A. Gelz (R-Allegheny) of the Senate Finance committee received permission of the upper branch to hold an all-day hearing tomorrow in the Senate chamber on the administration tax program. The hearing will open at 9 a. m.

Gelz told reporters later there have been quite a few requests for a hearing from organizations opposed to one or another of the tax measures recommended by Governor Duff to meet the rising cost of government and declining revenues from existing levies in the next biennium.

Asked if anyone would appear to argue in favor of the measure, Gelz said he doubted it because "the governor already has stated his position in the budget message."

The tax measure would impose new levies on cigars, smoking and chewing tobacco and soft drinks, increase those on cigarettes and beer and expand and renew corporation levies.

Dent Attacks Tax

Continuing his attacks on the proposed taxes, Sen. John H. Dent (D-Westmoreland) told the Senate yesterday there are "possibilities of effecting great tax savings in the administration" of public assistance in Pennsylvania.

Asserting the administrative cost of assistance has jumped from $2.92 per case in 1938 to $4.26 per case last February, Dent asked "Are we to saddle the people of Pennsylvania with this new tax load without lifting our fingers to attempt a program of economy?"

Republican Senate Leader O. J. Tallman said the figures Dent presented "must necessarily include" increased salaries to departmental employees due to rising living costs and therefore "it is unfair to indicate mismanagement" merely because of the boost.

The opposition to the bank closing and Sunday hockey measures was led by Sen. John J. Haluska in the Senate, the Cambria Democrat asking of the bank proposal "how can we pass on legislative duties to a group of bank directors?"

Permissive Legislation
He urged the measure should be compulsory to meet constitutional objections, but co-sponsor Frazier said such a bill "would not go through the Legislature because many rural district banks are very busy on Saturday."

He described the measure as permissive legislation under which individual banks can decide upon or remain closed on Saturdays as they wish. Frazier added that he was informed by the banking department banks at present can close part of any day of the week provided they are open long enough "to take care of any papers" needing bank action.

RUSS TACTICS MAY SOON END MOSCOW TALKS

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Moscow, April 8 (AP)—American sources said today that unless the Russians ceased what the Americans called obstructionist tactics in the Foreign Ministers' council the whole conference could end very soon.

These informants said a showdown was taking shape within the four-power council between Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and the ministers of the western powers.

The basic issue is whether the four powers must continue long the discussion on current German problems which have proved fruitless, or whether they can go on to frontiers and other matters, with the possibility of eventual agreement on the Austrian treaty. An American official said the German subject had been talked out and that all views were known. He said nothing new could be said, and that if the Russians were unwilling to go on with other matters, the conference might as well end.

Progress On Austria

The Russian proposal to permit Germany to choose by plebiscite the form of her future government was regarded by western diplomats as an effort to offset the effect upon the German people of the insistent Soviet demands for $10,000,000,000 in reparations.

These demands, thus far blocked by U. S. Secretary of State Marshall, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, have created a problem for Russia in German politics. This was regarded by some delegates as the underlying cause for the plebiscite proposal, rejected by the western powers last night.

The deputy Foreign Ministers considering the Austrian settlement wound up their work on the treaty today and agreed to British and American suggestions for final adjournment unless the Foreign Ministers themselves could make progress and call them back into session with new instructions.

Lauded By Office

Walters will then pick up the children from grades five to eight at Glenwood and discharge them at Church school before continuing to the high school.

Charles McCadden's route will continue to cover the same territory as before but McCadden will be asked to secure a large school bus instead of a passenger car now in use. He will continue to discharge grade one to four students at Glenwood and then take fifth to eighth grade students to Church school. At Church he will pick up the one to four students there and return with them to Glenwood.

The office of the county superintendent of schools, queried on the action of the Highland township board, expressed pleasure on the motion this morning and added that as a result of its action the board will be doubling its educational system's efficiency at a cost of only a few dollars. Greatest advantage of graded schools, the county office pointed out, is that the students immediately get twice as much time per grade.

Some Extra Cost

Some additional expenditure will have to be made for transportation but the state pays 81 per cent of the cost in Highland township. The board also plans to purchase some additional teaching equipment because of the increased time available per grade and some furnishings will have to be transferred between the two schools.

Rural districts so far which have regraded schools are Berwick, Conewago, Franklin, Menallen, Mt. Joy, Oxford and now Highland, the county office said. It was also added that among the other districts which will be faced with problems of reorganization for next year because they have less than 30 students per school include: Cumberland, Freedom, Germany, Hamilton, Hamiltonban, Huntingdon, Latimore, Mt. Pleasant, Tyrone and Union townships.

Ardent Pacifist

That was in 1903, and at his death, the great empire belonged exclusively to his family and had manufactured more than 31,000,000 vehicles.

Ford returned only a week ago from his annual visit to the Ford estate in Georgia and was said to have been in excellent health at that time. He had been planning to celebrate his wife's birthday and their 50th wedding anniversary next Friday.

The passing of the elder Ford ended a career that had many facets. He was an ardent pacifist, a prohibitionist, deeply interested in sociology and in the development of agriculture as an adjunct to industry.

Ford, who abhorred war, once tried to stop the first world conflict with a peace ship expedition to Europe, designed to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." It was a failure that cost Ford $400,000.

SIGNIFICANCE IN DE GAULLE TALK FOR WORLD SEEN

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

General Charles DeGaulle, who recently has been showing marked signs of hitting the return-trail for political leadership of France, yesterday made a pronouncement of solidarity with America in terms which will be widely interpreted as subscribing to President Truman's policy of aiding countries whose independence is threatened by Communist aggression.

If that's what the general has in mind, it's a highly important development. It would mean that he is throwing down the gauntlet to the French Communists who are straining every nerve to take over the government of France and are his chief opposition. His strength lies in the powerful middle-of-the-road popular Republican movement — which polls about the same number of votes as the Communists — and in the more conservative groups.

General DeGaulle made his declaration at Strasbourg in the course of a speech paying tribute to American soldiers who died to help liberate his country. It is interesting that the night before President Truman reaffirmed his new foreign policy in his Jefferson Day address, DeGaulle declared his country would stand beside the United States against any new tyranny.

"It is a fact," he said "that this young nation (the United States) like our elderly country, has shown not only love for its own liberty but, still more, a respect for that of others . . . it is a fact that each time in the world that justice finds herself assaulted, a loud alarm at once awakens the French and American consciences. Our two democracies have always found the same and powerful inspiration when they have had to defend threatened liberties."

DeGaulle has no official position now. He created a sensation and threw France into political confusion when he resigned the presidency on January 20, 1946, because the Communists and other leftists defeated his plan for a constitution which would provide for a strong executive. The opposition wanted a weak president and a strong assembly.

Since then DeGaulle has, achilles-like, clung pretty close to his tent. However, the signs are that he once more is ready to give battle. If this is so, it will be a bitter conflict in which Communism is bound to become the main issue. If France should go Communist it would give Moscow one of the most formidable bases on the European continent — in the world, for that matter.

Taft Says Congress Will Cut Taxes, Costs

Washington, April 8 (AP)—Senator Taft of Ohio declared Monday that the Republican-controlled Congress will disregard President Truman's "political timing" and cut both taxes and government expenses this year.

Taft, who heads the Senate Republican Policy committee, told a reporter he regards as a "purely political statement" the president's assertion in his Saturday night Jefferson Day address that the Republicans are headed toward "false economy."

"The president's budget will be cut," Taft said. "Estimated revenues are going to be larger. Taxes can be cut and a large surplus left to apply on the debt, for which the Democrats are suddenly much concerned after 14 years."

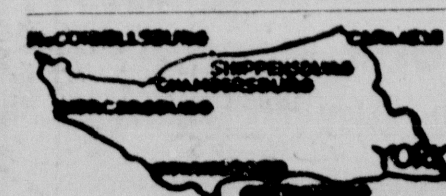

"If we don't cut taxes now," the Ohio Senator continued, "the spenders will soon find new ways to spend and spend and elect and elect."

Oscar M. Hinton, 63, Coal Executive, Dies

Keyport, N. Patrolman W. W. Newman reported there are no gates at the crossing and that a bell is the only warning signal.

Although he is best known as vice president, controller and director of the Berwind-White Coal Mining company with mines in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky and office headquarters at 1 Broadway, New York, Hinton had gained nationwide recognition as a director of several international coal firms, steamship lines and in other industrial fields.

Delay Probe Of Mine Safety Laws

Harrisburg, April 8 (AP)—A legislative inquiry into the adequacy of Pennsylvania's mine safety laws and their enforcement was delayed today by the House Mines committee. Chairman Earl E. Declaring he was unable to "step in and usurp" the authority of Mines Secretary Richard Maize, Hewitt said a personal inspection by the committee of mine safety conditions would take the committee "more than two years to complete."

FEAR MISSING CHILD IS DEAD IN MOUNTAINS

Philipsburg, Pa., April 8 (AP)—Four-year-old Jimmy Sencer was missing today on the wild, windswept mountains of central Pennsylvania and weary searchers feared the little boy might already be dead of exposure.

Hundreds of searchers, armed with lanterns and flashlights, braved the icy blasts to continue their search through the night.

Jimmy disappeared from his home Easter Sunday clad only in a thin undershirt and the only clues to date have been a small red sweater found on a railroad track near his home and several footprints of his bare feet in the mud.

Strayed From Home
The missing child, youngest of three children is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sencer, of nearby Lock Lohmond. He was playing with his brother Sylvester, aged seven, and his sister Leona May, five, while his mother was preparing Easter Sunday dinner.

The mother called the children for dinner but Jimmy failed to appear.

His red sweater was found near a narrow gauge mine railroad about 500 yards from his home, and further search disclosed prints of his tiny bare feet near a water hole formed by coal stripping operations. The area in which the little boy is believed to be lost is especially treacherous as it is partly stripped from coal mining operations and is pitted with abandoned coal holes, some of which are filled with water.

Floodlights Used
Two trucks equipped with public address systems were driven into the area last night and the child's mother made frequent calls for him as the trucks drove along the mountain roads.

One volunteer fire company hooked up giant floodlights near the scene where the child disappeared and established a headquarters for the searching parties, serving hot coffee and sandwiches.

What do you think railroads make?

15%

What do you think they should make?

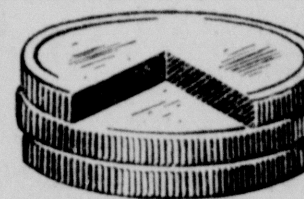

10%

What are the facts?

Actually the railroads earned only 2 3/4% in 1946.

To provide the service you want, railroads need to earn at least 6%. But estimates indicate that even with the recent freight rate increase, the return for 1947 will be only about half that requirement.

2 3/4%

Why it takes 6% to make the grade . . .

Impartial research polls show that, on the average, people think we make 15%. They also think a fair return would be 10%.

What We Make

But for the year 1946, with the biggest peace-time traffic in history, the railroads earned only . . . 2 3/4%. This is less than one-half the comparable earnings for other industries.

The reasons for this low return are not hard to find. Since 1939 railroad wages have increased 52 1/2% and the prices of fuel, materials and supplies have gone up 61 1/2%.

But freight rates have just recently been increased an average of only 17 1/2%—a year after the effective date of the last big wage increase.

What About This Year?

It is estimated that the return for 1947, even with the recent freight rate increase, will be only about half the 6% minimum return required to provide the improvements and service needed. This will be because of increased costs of materials and supplies; because certain wage increases granted in 1946 were in effect for only part of 1946 but will be in effect for all of 1947; because of increased special payroll taxes on railroads; and because of a decline in passenger business.

What Does This Mean To You?

The answer is "Plenty!" Your standard of living is the highest in the world because of MASS PRODUCTION. But mass production would not be possible without MASS TRANSPORTATION, which the railroads provide at low cost.

Why 6% Is Needed

The kind of service your standard of living requires takes a lot of money for new equipment and improvements. To carry out the post-war improvement program for better equipment, tracks, terminals and modern safety devices, a minimum return of 6% is needed.

So when the railroads make only 2 3/4 cents on each $1.00 of their net property investment, it concerns you.

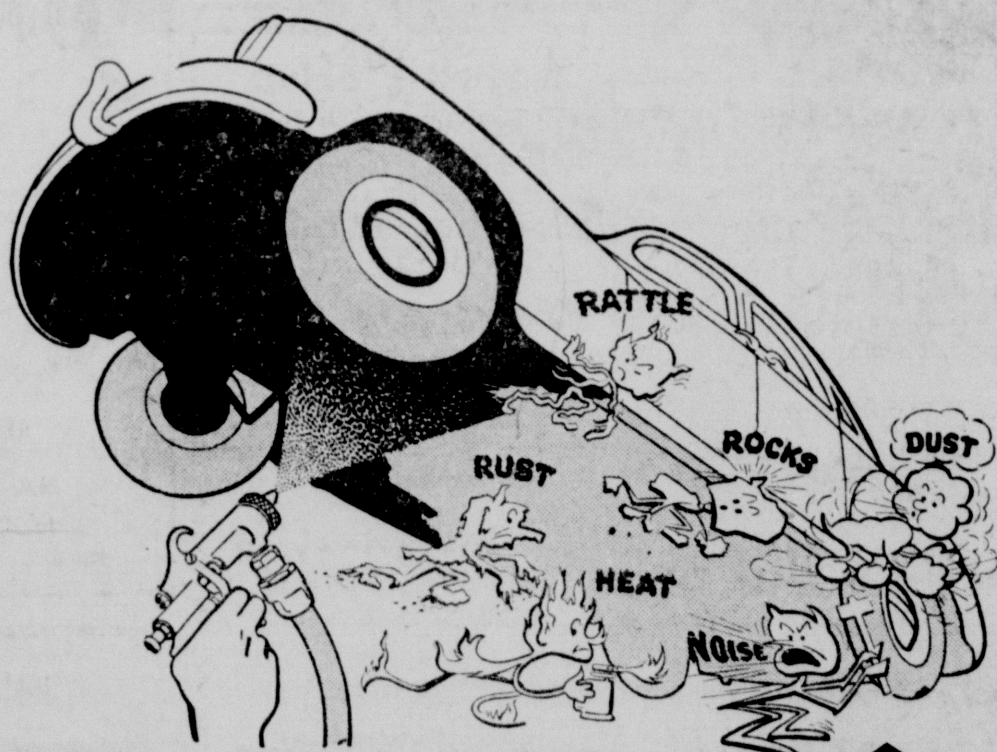

The funds for future new equipment and improvements must come from railroad earnings and also from investors. They will furnish money on reasonable terms only if they have confidence in the future earnings of the railroads.

You Have Another Stake In This
Even if you do not own any railroad stocks or bonds, insurance companies and savings banks do. So you still have a special interest in seeing that the railroads are allowed enough to do a good job . . . for you.

We are publishing this and other advertisements to talk with you at first hand about matters which are important to everybody.

SIGNIFICANCE IN DE GAULLE TALK FOR WORLD SEEN

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

General Charles DeGaulle, who recently has been showing marked signs of hitting the return-trail for political leadership of France, yesterday made a pronouncement of solidarity with America in terms which will be widely interpreted as subscribing to President Truman's policy of aiding countries whose independence is threatened by Communist aggression.

If that's what the general has in mind, it's a highly important development. It would mean that he is throwing down the gauntlet to the French Communists who are straining every nerve to take over the government of France and are his chief opposition. His strength lies in the powerful middle-of-the-road popular Republican movement—which polls about the same number of votes as the Communists—and in the more conservative groups.

General DeGaulle made his declaration at Strasbourg in the course of a speech paying tribute to American soldiers who died to help liberate his country. It is interesting that the night before President Truman reaffirmed his new foreign policy in his Jefferson Day address, DeGaulle declared his country would stand beside the United States against any new tyranny.

MARX BROTHERS HAVE MADE LAST FILM TOGETHER

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, (AP) — The long and arduous association of the Marx brothers on the screen has come to an end. This statement comes from other Gummis, who handles business matters for the comedians.

The brothers will make no more pictures together, Gummis said. He couldn't elaborate, but it's generally known that the boys were dissatisfied with their last film and realized the hardships of finding a suitable vehicle for their unique talents.

Each is going his own way, and it's reported the teaming of Groucho and Carmen Miranda turned out ill and may lead to more pictures for the pair.

Strange things happen in financial deals in this town. For instance Gregory Peck received $30,000 for his role in "The Paradine Case." His fees for "Earth and High Heaven" will cost $300,000, of which he'll get $180,000. His other films for the next couple of years will be for peanuts (relatively so, for a top actor) because of air-tight deals he made while getting his start four years ago.

Brenda Marshall Back
Brenda Marshall, the lovely wife of Bill Holden, found the role she wanted, so she's temporarily abandoning her family duties to return to the screen. She'll be with Alan Ladd in "Whispering Smith," her first film in three years.

Pat O'Brien and James Cagney are in a picture again. That's an exciting idea and Pat told me on the "Fighting Father Dunne" set that they have been talking about making a picture together.

The only trouble is that Jimmy doesn't like to work.

Keenan Wynn is so broke he was going to float a loan for a down payment on a new car. He gets custody of his children on Mondays and Tuesdays and feels he should have a "respectable" car to drive them in. At present, he's not on salary at MGM and he wants to try the cheapest new car available.

Charles Laughton is passing up future film deals because he hopes he can finally get his "Galileo" play into production. The only problem is finding an angel; the production is not cheap.

Buys 60 Dresses
A sign of the times? The wife of a rich eastern sportsman bought the entire new collection of one of Hollywood's most exclusive fashion designers. That's 60 high-priced dresses. Whew!

James Barton, out of "The Ice-cream Cometh," may play the Kit Carson role in "Time of Your Life."

MANY BILLS OFFERED IN LEGISLATURE

Harrisburg, April 8 (AP)—Democratic proposals to make it mandatory for employers to carry insurance for occupational disease and workmen's compensation are before the senate today.

Sens. John H. Dent (D-Westmoreland) and Maxwell Rosenfeld (D-Phila.) sponsored a series which Dent, senate minority leader, said carry out the Democratic party pledges for liberalization of compensation laws.

At present, employers can decide whether or not to carry policies covering liabilities for occupational disease or injury claims of employees, but the Dent-Rosenfeld measures would abolish suits at common law for such claims and require employees to be protected by insurance. If enacted, they would be effective October 1.

Senate Measures
Other senate measures would: Lapse all unexpended or unencumbered balances of appropriations made by the legislature for what ever purpose up to 1943—James A. Goltz (R-Allegheny).

Bar opening of branch banks in any community unless the municipality concerned lacks adequate banking facilities—Clarence D. Becker (D-Lebanon).

House Bills
Other new house measures would: Require persons who find lost articles to turn them over to the police to determine ownership—Edward J. Griffiths (R-Phila.).

Exempt laundries and meat markets from the four-mill corporate net income tax—F. Garrett Richter (R-Allegheny) and Henry J. Probert (R-Montgomery).

Levy a two-cent tax on each quart of lubricating oil sold in Pennsylvania—F. Garrett Richter (R-Allegheny).

Out Of The Past
From the Files of the Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times
FIFTY YEARS AGO
A Wonderful Exhibition: The most startling exhibition ever offered to the public will be given in Brua Chapel on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, April 8, 9 and 10, by the American Cinegraph Co. under the auspices of the Gettysburg College Athletic Association. The marvelous cinegraph projects upon a mammoth screen Edison's life pictures, life size and moving just as in life. The inauguration of President McKinley will be shown together with hundreds of other views, and a change of program nightly. The phonograph will give the necessary effects to the pictures. The admission will be 15, 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats on sale at Buehler's Drug Store.
One must realize that this marvelous instrument brings before the eye an exact life-size reproduction of life motion with all its accompanying effects of light, shade and expression.
To illustrate, we will describe a scene as it is now exhibited in Theatres, Opera Houses or Halls.
A large white screen is stretched across the stage, suddenly the house is darkened and before the eyes of the audience a huge window appears to open. Through it they see a bit of meadow landscape with a forest in the background, from which, to a point close by the window, stretches a section of railway line on an embankment.
Every detail of motion is so clearly defined that even the rapid rise and fall of the piston rods can be plainly seen. As the train rushes past, the section men wave their hats to the engineer who is leaning from the cab window and the porters are shaking table linen from the platform of the dining coach.
In a twinkling the whole scene disappears, and can be repeated if the audience so desires, or a new picture takes its place at once.

Wedding Bells: A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. J. M. Minnigh, on Baltimore street on Wednesday at 1:30 p. m., the contracting parties being Miss C. Blanche Minnigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Minnigh and Frank Dougherty, the popular young clerk at J. H. Sanders & Son.
Rev. A. R. Stock performed the ceremony promptly at 1:30 o'clock. To the beautiful strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march rendered by Misses Eva Danner and Beanie Tipton, the wedding party entered the spacious parlors and proceeded to the center of the parlor under a beautifully festooned arch where the nuptial knot was tied.
The bride was attired in a white silk with lace and pearl trimmings and carried an exquisite bouquet of white roses.
The ushers were Rev. R. W. Mottern, Messrs. Chase Flaherty, Allen Plank and Harry Bender, and the best man Mr. Wm. Kitzmiller. The maid of honor was Miss Elsie Eichelberger, of Baltimore, Md.
The flower girls Edith Minnigh and Marguerite Weaver immediately preceded the bride and groom and dropped flowers for them to tread upon.
After the ceremony the whole party was invited to the dining room for refreshments.

Today's Talk
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
STILLNESS
There is a line in the Bible that has always fascinated me: "Be still and know that I am God." It sounds like a challenge, doesn't it? A challenge to thoughtfulness—an arresting statement. As though to say: "Dismiss all noise, all else from hearing, all interests. 'Know that I am God.'"
I have looked, for long moments, upon some natural creation, like a pure, wax-like lily, for example, still, smiling, colorful, and yet with a silent message that creeps deeply into the heart. Why did it bloom? Why so exquisite in formation and fragrance? Who thought it out—and why? Even this flower seems to say: "Know that I am God!" Stillness—but a message just the same.
So much has been written, and put into poetry, about the "still waters." I know why—because of their suggestion of peace and tranquility. So often at my Nova Scotia summer camp, I have sat of an evening when the waters of the lake made no sound—just still—and how many a Moonlit night have I walked out, before retiring, to note the path of gold across these still waters—an unwritten poem.
There are comfort and assuagement to the silent night—especially away from the turmoil and traffic of city streets—far into the country—where this stillness is watched over by the sky's thousands of eyes. It was out there in the forest, before Walden Pond, that Thoreau was inspired to write his masterpiece "Walden."
I can understand the fascination of the desert. I have driven over one of our Western deserts for hours and hours—without a sound beyond the purr of my car's engine. And it didn't make me feel lonely—only thoughtful. Many have homes on the edge of some of these deserts, for no other reason, I suspect, than as medicine to the soul.
One of the most dramatic essays I have ever read, is that one by Alexander Smith, contained in his book "Dreamthorp," entitled "A Lark's Flight." An execution is about to be performed in a lonely countryside in England, but at the crucial moment, a lark flies from beneath the scaffold, leaving a stream of song in its path, a challenge to the silent tragedy of that event.
Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "The Human Touch"

CARE NEEDED SEEDING LAWN
Even though it is agreed that spring is not the best time to seed a new lawn, there will be little argument that a new lawn can be started during this season with assurance of success if some simple rules and good plant culture are followed, says J. W. Johnston, Horticulture editor of the New York Herald-Tribune. Good seed naturally is the first rule, yet this may be completely wasted if a good bed is not provided for it.
Grass, like all other garden plants, needs and demands a fertile soil with adequate drainage.
Each grass plant, like any other plant, requires enough food and moisture to sustain it through the garden season and on through the dormant winter period.
For general good commercial grass seed mixtures, the soil should be on the neutral side, neither alkaline nor acid, even though certain specific varieties of grasses prefer either acid or alkaline soil. Very little trouble will be experienced in the average metropolitan area because soil is too alkaline; it generally is found to be on the acid side and needs an application of lime to bring it to a neutral point. The lime also acts as a soil conditioner in opening up the soil and making it more reactive to applications of plant food.
If the soil is heavy, peat, sand or humus will make it more porous and more retentive of the elements that make for good growth. If too light, peat or humus also may be used to make it hold both moisture and plant food more effectively.
If the area to be planted is uneven, grading should precede actual ploughing or digging. Even off the rough or high spots, then spade or plough. In a small area, a more efficient although more laborious job will be achieved by spading or forking the soil. If well rotted manure is available, spread it and fork it under before digging. As the digging proceeds, break up the lumps. If lime is needed, put it on at the rate of fifty pounds of hydrated lime to each 500 square feet before raking the soil.
After sowing has been completed use a steel rake, first from east to west, then from north to south, for even coverage of the seed. A light rolling following this raking will aid in quick germination. If the soil is slightly on the dry side, water with fine spray until the soil is wet to a depth of at least two inches. This will hurry the new lawn and give it a running start against weeds that must be combatted in early spring. As the grass begins to show, carefully rake over all bare spots and reseed so that an even stand will be achieved.
Defer the first cutting until the grass is four inches high, then set the mower to cut no shorter than two inches, thus no young plants will be damaged. Do not feed the lawn again until after the third cutting, at which time an application of a complete plant food may be made, following manufacturer's directions. New lawns either should be lightly raked or else mowed with a catcher to keep the young plants from being smothered by the clippings.

WOULD BOLSTER AUTHORITY OF COUNTY BOARDS
Harrisburg, April 8 (P)—Legislation giving county school authorities power to consolidate school bus routes and to propose school mergers will save "millions" in school transportation costs, Sen. Frederick L. Homsher (R-Lancaster) said today.
The measure, offered by Homsher in the Senate, would allow the State Council of Education to pass on county mergers and would authorize county school boards to recommend county-wide plans for consolidation of one-room schools.
It would also permit the county board, on the recommendation of county school superintendents, to determine school bus routes and allow the state to refuse aid to school districts on broader grounds than it present.
"The measure takes the question of school mergers out of the hands of local school boards," Homsher explained. "Some of them just won't budge. I have some of them in my own county who won't even talk about consolidation of one-room schools."
On the question of transportation, Homsher said the end of duplication of routes where two school districts operate different buses along the same road would save "millions" now paid out by the commonwealth for this purpose.
Homsher's measure also provides that voters of school districts would have the final say on proposed mergers after they receive the approval of state and county school authorities.
Another bill introduced by Homsher, chairman of the Senate education committee, would authorize the state to subsidize high schools with less than 200 pupils with sufficient funds to provide the necessary teaching staff required to give "satisfactory educational program."
A measure sponsored by Sen. George N. Wade (R-Cumberland) would permit municipal authorities to build new school buildings.

Geraniums Are Easy Plants To Grow
Geraniums are not difficult to grow, and seed sown now will develop into sturdy blooming plants before the season is over. They may be potted before frost to continue their flower display in the house.
A good strain of seed will give a great many different shades of pink, rose, salmon, scarlet, crimson and white. Those who want a specific color, however, must rely on the plant propagated from cuttings, because the seed, no matter true to the color of the parent plant, will develop into sturdy blooming plants before the season is over. They may be potted before frost to continue their flower display in the house.

County Weekly Farm And Garden Section
Garden Activities For Early April
If the weather is moderate, sow all varieties of peas, radishes, carrots, leaf lettuce, parsnips, spinach, beets and Swiss chard.
Plant onion sets in well fertilized and limed soil in rows fifteen inches apart. The sets should be barely covered with soil and should be placed erect at an interval of three to four inches.
If the lawn has gone unattended until now, give it special consideration and rake bare spots, reseed, roll or tamp.
Trees and shrubs that cannot be planted immediately on arrival from the nursery should be heeled in.
Set out strawberry plants in a well drained soil and sunny location. Plants should be set fifteen inches apart in rows two to three feet apart. The crowns should be exactly level with the ground.
Care of Roses
Remove the hilling soil from roses after the tops have started to grow. Set out blueberry plants in a well drained acid soil. Apply a mulch of peat moss, oak leaves and sawdust.
April is a good time to divide African violets.
Seed hardy annuals where they are to flower.
Set out standard and dwarf fruit trees.
Give the perennial border a generous application of a complete plant food at this time. Dig it in with a fork but take care while doing so not to disturb the plants in the border.
When planting bare root trees and shrubs, remove all broken, dead or badly dried roots.
Early planting of trees and shrubs is desirable. The holes should be large enough to provide ample room for the roots to spread their full length without touching the sides of the holes. The planting depth should be an inch deeper than in the nursery, which is indicated by the ring of earth around the trunk. A thorough watering should be given after planting.
Burn Rose Prunings
Spray roses with Bordeaux mixture before the buds start. Remove all injured and dead wood. Burn all rose prunings to kill any insects that they may be harboring.
Begin spraying and dusting delphiniums, hollyhocks and phlox as soon as plants start to grow.
Tubers of the tuberous rooted begonias may be started indoors now. Plant them just barely below the surface in a box of soil lightened with sand and leafmold. Shade the box from strong light.
Prune evergreen hedges, especially arborvitae, hemlock, boxwood, yew and juniper just before growth starts. Do not cut back beyond last year's growth.
The planting of lilacs should be done early as they are among the first shrubs to start growth.

Plant Food Value Doubled Using Placement Method
There are three ways that plant food may be applied with good effect on gardens—by broadcasting, by spading under, and by placement. The first is used on lawns, and established plants in borders; and is best done in the early spring, when the frost is coming out of the ground, leaving it in a "honey-combed" condition.
In borders in which deep rooted perennials or bulbs are to grow, plant food may be spread evenly over the area and spaded under, where it will be in a favorable relation to plant roots and soil moisture. This method is also preferable for annual flowers which are grown in masses rather than in rows.
For vegetables and flowers which are grown in rows, the most effective method has been proved to be "placement," in a band on each side of the row, near enough to the seed to give results in the early growth of the plant, but not so near as to injure the infant seedlings, which usually suffer from an overdose of nitrogen. Beans and peas are especially sensitive to fertilizer injury in their early growth.
There are technical advantages in the placement methods, which have been proved to result in the same amount of plant food giving results double those from a similar amount which has been broadcast. The food is placed where it is easily reached by the roots of growing plants; and a smaller proportion of it becomes fixed in the soil, and consequently slowly available to the plants. Like humans, plants need special

Brussels Sprouts Easy To Grow
The cabbage group of garden vegetables includes cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, Chinese cabbage, cauliflower, collards and kohlrabi. All these are exceptionally rich in vitamins A, B, and C, also desirable minerals. They are easy to grow, quite hardy against cold weather after spring planting, and some of them may be stored successfully for late fall and early winter use. Brussels sprouts measure up to these group merits and should be included in every vegetable garden.
Like other members of the cole group, Brussels sprouts demand a fertile, mellow, well drained loam containing sufficient organic matter to hold moisture throughout the growing season. Well rotted manure turned under deeply and worked through the soil is usually beneficial in adding to the organic matter supply. A complete fertilizer should be employed, something ranging from a 4-12-4 to a 6-8-6 mixture. This should be broadcast and worked uniformly into the top soil before plants are set out. When growth is slow any time before the tiny heads begin to form, one or two side-dressings with nitrate of soda stimulates growth.
Seed for extra early plants should be sown under glass from late February until late March, with seedlings shifted to individual pots or bands in a sunny coldframe until soil and weather conditions permit final transplanting to their growing site. At this stage of the season seed may be sown under glass for plants to set out in early May. Of course, small gardeners may easily buy early plants from commercial sources.
The edible parts closely resemble small heads of cabbage in form and texture, although their flavor is somewhat milder. They appear at the axils of the leaves and when nearing full or harvest size crowd the entire stalk from ground to upper leaves. In order to afford them room to develop fully, growers should remove the lower leaves after crowding begins. Of course, none of the top leaves should be removed.
By cutting the heads smoothly from the stalk with a sharp knife the plant may be induced to form a second set of heads. However, plants should be set out in late June and into July for the late crop. Gardeners are learning how easy it is to take up late plants of Brussels sprouts, laden with their heads, and set them into a coldframe or hotbed pit and firm soil around them in much the same manner as if they were being transplanted. By keeping the sash on the bed over freezing periods and ventilating to avoid drenches, gardeners may enjoy the tender heads far into early winter.
Plants may be set out any time in early April, providing some protection is provided if severe freezes occur. In general like other members of the crucifer group of vegetables, Brussels sprouts are not injured by light frosts. Spacing in the home garden may be 12 to 18 inches apart in rows 24 inches wide.
It is wise to keep a fairly close watch for the green cabbage aphid feeding on the stems and under sides of the leaves. Lice are simple to kill off with a prompt coating of nicotine sulfate in soapy water. The green cabbage worm can be controlled by an application of rotenone dust or spray. Many growers prefer a nicotine dust in place of the spray for controlling plant lice. Effectiveness of both the nicotine spray and dust is increased by choosing a time for application when the air is still and the temperature is above 70 degrees.

FOOL'S PARADISE. San Francisco, (A) — Five fluffy lambs came up from the country, near San Jose, to take show window jobs for Easter in a big department store. Theater artist William Walsh gave each an exquisite fleece-do. One came out pink, one orange, one green, one blue and one yellow.

Now that the big town is through with them, the lambs are finding life back on the farm a bit tough. Until their colors wear off or can be washed out, ranch hands said, not a single one of the other lambs will have a thing to do with the models. Not even the black sheep are civil.

'WAITING GAME' IN COAL FIELDS

Washington, April 8 (A) — The government and John L. Lewis played a waiting game today as reports from the soft coal fields indicated one-third normal production despite a decision by the United Mine Workers to stay out of diggings they consider unsafe.

Capt. N. H. Collisson, the federal coal mines administrator, stood pat on his ruling that so far as he is concerned any mine may operate if the local union safety committee and operating manager certify it as safe pending reinspection by the Bureau of Mines.

The Coal Mines Administration said its reports last night showed 100,000 miners, including 54,000 members of John L. Lewis' UMW, digging coal in 500 pits on the first day of the scheduled safety stoppage after the union's six-day mourning period for victims of the Centralia, Ill. blast. The UMW has 400,000 soft coal miners.

In reporting on yesterday's turnout of workers, the CMA said that the 54,000 UMW miners were "ignoring orders of union officials" to stay from work until the mines have been re-inspected and certified as safe by federal inspectors.

Yesterday's production was estimated at 723,000 tons, or 32 per cent of a normal day's output.

MAKE PROGRESS

Paul H. Griffith, national commander of the American Legion, will be he guest of honor at the annual commencement exercises at Scotland school June 7, Adjutant Harry D. Ridinger announced. Commander Edward Culp urged as many members as possible to attend the commencement exercises.

Fourteen new members were accepted into the post bringing its membership to 1,193. The new members include John Wilmer Fry, South Washington street; John Arthur Watts, Steinwehr avenue; Howard E. Hankey, South Washington street; Eugene R. Smeed, Gardner's, R. 2; Paul Robert Knox, Steinwehr avenue; Mark A. Kemmer, Steinwehr street; William C. Richardson, Iron Springs; John Bernard Adams, Carl-tanna R. 1; Russell Nicholas Sanders, Iron Springs; Robert G. Martin, Bendersville; Edgar Elwood Felix, Gettysburg R. 1; Herbert J. Keefe, Biglerville; C. Allen Stock, Harrisburg and Melvin Curtis Her-ring, Cashtown.

Plan Observance. Plans for some type of observance by the post for National Citizenship or "I Am An American" day on May 18 were discussed. A letter from Superintendent of Schools Lloyd C. Keefe urging the post to sponsor some activity in connection with the day and a proclamation by President Truman setting the day and urging exercises "designed to help our citizens better to understand their privileges and responsibilities" were read.

A $5 donation to the National Association of Christians and Jews was approved and a suggestion that something be given M-Sgt. William Baldwin for his services over the years as bugler at Legion funerals was turned over to the donations committee. About 60 members attended the session.

Chapter 25

As Jeff urged Star to a gallop, he argued with himself. It was hard to dislodge the feeling of inquietude that had filled him since his fight with Ransom Fawcett.

Fighting Fawcett had been like tackling a football dummy filled with feathers instead of sawdust.

Linda was waiting in the yard. When Jeff stabled the gelding and came out into the sunlight she ran to him anxiously.

"Jeff, are you all right?" She grinned down at her. "Kind of changed your mind, didn't you? I thought you weren't speaking to me."

"As long as we're under the same roof I guess I will."

She averted her face but was unable to hide the smile that lit her eyes, and Jeff chuckled irresistibly.

"It's nice to know I'll have someone to talk to the rest of my life."

"What do you mean?"

"Don't pretend you don't know."

She opened her eyes very wide. "But I don't—really."

"For Pete's sake, woman, what must I do, get on my knees to you?"

Jeff dropped to his knees in the dust, putting out his arms in an exaggeratedly eloquent gesture.

"Pray thee, fair maiden, can you see it in your heart to accept the hand of a humble petitioner in marriage?"

Linda's face grew scarlet. . . . She tugged at his shoulders nervously.

"Jeff, get up, for Heaven's sake! Here comes Dad!"

"That's a helluva way to react to a proposal!" he teased.

Mr. Hardy was standing on the porch watching them and Jeff took Linda's hand and pulled her over to the adobe.

"Sir, I've just done something I've been swearing I wouldn't do for the past week. — I've asked Linda to marry me."

Hardy chuckled. "Was it so painful?"

"Not painful but senseless. You know as well as I, sir, that I'm in no position to make such a proposal."

"Can't agree with you there, son, some of the happiest marriages seem to start from bed rock. What did she say?"

Jeff spun around. "My Lord, she never answered me!"

Linda pursed her lips primly. "I must say, young man, you do not press your suit very enthusiastically. You propose and in the same breath say you've sworn you wouldn't."

"Jeff shot her a mocking glance. "Very well, I retract my offer."

"Indian giver!" Linda's fingers tightened on his arm. "Uhh uhh, you're too handsome a fish for me to let you wriggle off my hook now. Consider yourself netted, sir."

Laughing, Jeff swung her up to the edge of the porch, then pulled her head down and gave her a vigorous kiss. Mr. Hardy chuckled delightedly.

"Blessings on you, my children. And when you get around to it, Linda, it's way past dinner time and I've been out in the air all day working up a tremendous appetite."

She blushed, then smiled. "Well, I expect this will be my last proposal—you can't blame me for taking advantage of it."

They lingered over dinner, toasting their new happiness in a bottle of Mexican wine that Pacheco had given the Irskines six years before. Mr. Hardy regaled the two young people with stories of his own early married life.

"So you see, Jeff, how history repeats itself?" he concluded. "I had just returned from war when I married Linda's mother. I was penniless and not a very proficient artist then, but my girl stuck by me and we had a wonderfully happy life together. . . . Even after Linda arrived," he added with playful emphasis.

It grew dark outside as they ate and the stars were twinkling when they finished doing the dishes together. Jeff handed Linda the dish towel with a rueful grimace.

"Here I am letting you get me in bad habits even before we're hitched."

"I have it on the best authority that to train a husband, a gal has to begin early," she said impishly. The smile faded as a knock sounded on the door. "Callers at this time of night?" she frowned.

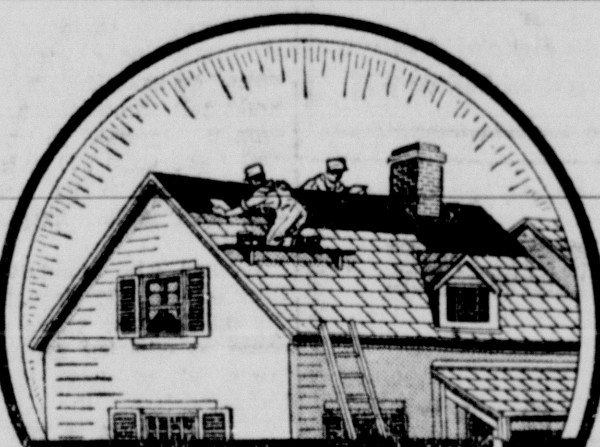

Mr. Hardy opened the door and stepped back a little as Coulter's stocky figure was silhouetted against the night. He looked as though braced for an argument and the outline of a shoulder holster was distinct beneath his leather jacket.

"Looks like the rent is due again, Hardy," he said shortly.

Jeff felt his muscles grow taut. Coulter was in no hurry for the rent.

FOOL'S PARADISE $ $ Five fluffy lambs came up from the country, near San Jose, to take show window jobs for Easter in a big department store. Theater artist William Walsh gave each an exquisite fleece—do. One came out pink, one orange, one green, one blue and one yellow.

Now that the big town is through with them, the lambs are finding life back on the farm a bit tough. Until their colors wear off or can be washed out, ranch hands said, not a single one of the other lambs will have a thing to do with the models. Not even the black sheep are civil.

'WAITING GAME' IN COAL FIELDS

Washington, April 8 (AP) — The government and John L. Lewis played a waiting game today as reports from the soft coal fields indicated one-third normal production despite a decision by the United Mine Workers to stay out of diggings they consider unsafe.

Capt. N. H. Collisson, the federal coal mines administrator, stood pat on his ruling that so far as he is concerned any mine may operate if the local union safety committee and operating manager certify it as safe pending reinspection by the Bureau of Mines.

The Coal Mines Administration said its reports last night showed 100,000 miners, including 54,000 members of John L. Lewis' UMW, digging coal in 500 pits on the first day of the scheduled safety stoppage after the union's six-day mourning period for victims of the Centralia, Ill., blast. The UMW has 400,000 soft coal miners.

In reporting on yesterday's turnout of workers, the CMA said that the 54,000 UMW miners were "ignoring orders of union officials" to stay from work until the mines have been re-inspected and certified as safe by federal inspectors.

Yesterday's production was estimated at 723,000 tons, or 32 per cent of a normal day's output.

MAKE PROGRESS

Paul H. Griffith, national commander of the American Legion, will be guest of honor at the annual commencement exercises at Scotland school June 7. Adjutant Harry D. Ridinger announced. Commander Edward Culp urged as many members as possible to attend the commencement exercises.

Fourteen new members were accepted into the post bringing its membership to 1193. The new members include John Wilmer Fry, South Washington street; John Arthur Watts, Steinwehr avenue; Howard E. Henken, South Washington street; Eugene R. Smeed, Gardners, R. 2; Paul Robert Knox, Steinwehr avenue; Mark A. Kemper, Strattor street; William C. Richardson, Iron Springs; John Bernard Adams, Iannina R. 1; Russell Nicholas Sanders, Iron Springs; Robert G. Martin, Bendersville; Edgar Alwood Felix, Gettysburg R. 1; Herbert J. Keefe, Biglerville; C. Allen Stock, Harrisburg and Melvin Curtis Harris, Cashtown.

Plan Observance Plans for some type of observance by the post for National Citizenship or "I Am An American" day on May 12 were discussed. A letter from Superintendent of Schools Lloyd C. Keefe urging the post to sponsor some activity in connection with the day and a proclamation by President Truman setting the day and urging exercises "designed to help our citizens better to understand their privileges and responsibilities" were read.

A $5 donation to the National Association of Christians and Jews was approved and a suggestion that something be given M-Sgt. William Baldwin for his services over the years as bugler at Legion funerals was turned over to the "donations" committee. About 60 members attended the session.

Chapter 26

As Jeff urged Star to a gallop, he argued with himself. It was hard to dislodge the feeling of inquietude that had filled him since his fight with Ransom Fawcett.

Fight! He tossed his cigarette angrily into a mesquite bush. Fighting Fawcett had been like tackling a football dummy filled with feathers instead of sawdust.

Linda was waiting in the yard. When Jeff stabled the gelding and came out into the sunlight she ran to him anxiously.

"Jeff, are you all right?" He grinned down at her. "Kind of changed your mind, didn't you? I thought you weren't speaking to me."

"As long as we're under the same roof I guess I will."

She averted her face but was unable to hide the smile that lit her eyes, and Jeff chuckled impressively.

"It's nice to know I'll have someone to talk to the rest of my life."

"What do you mean?" "Don't pretend you don't know."

She opened her eyes very wide. "But I don't—really."

"For Pete's sake, woman, what must I do, get on my knees to you?" Jeff dropped to his knees in the dust, putting out his arms in an exaggerated eloquent gesture.

"Pray thee, fair maiden, can you see it in your heart to accept the hand of a humble petitioner in marriage?"

Linda's face grew scarlet. . . . She tugged at his shoulders nervously. "Jeff, get up, for Heaven's sake! Here comes Dad!"

"That's a helluva way to react to a proposal!" he teased.

Mr. Hardy was standing on the porch watching them and Jeff took Linda's hand and pulled her over to the adobe.

"Sir, I've just done something I've been swearing I wouldn't do for the past week. — I've asked Linda to marry me."

Hardy chuckled, "Was it so painful?"

"Not painful but senseless. You know as well as I, sir, that I'm in no position to make such a proposal."

"Can't agree with you there, son, some of the happiest marriages seem to start from bed rock. What did she say?"

Jeff spun around. "My Lord, she never answered me!"

Linda pursed her lips primly. "I must say, young man, you do not press your suit very enthusiastically. You propose and in the same breath say you've sworn you wouldn't."

Jeff shot her a mocking glance. "Very well, I retract my offer."

"Indian giver!" Linda's fingers tightened on his arm. "Unh unh, you're too handsome a fish for me to let you wriggle off my hook now. Consider yourself netted, sir."

Laughing, Jeff swung her up to the edge of the porch, then pulled her head down and gave her a vigorous kiss. Mr. Hardy chuckled delightedly.

"Blessings on you, my children. And when you get around to it, Linda, it's way past dinner time and I've been out in the air all day working up a tremendous appetite."

She blushed, then smiled. "Well, I expect this will be my last proposal—you can't blame me for taking advantage of it."

They lingered over dinner, toasting their new happiness in a bottle of Mexican wine that Pacheco had given the Irskines six years before. Mr. Hardy regaled the two young people with stories of his own early married life.

"So you see, Jeff, how history repeats itself?" he concluded. "I had just returned from war when I married Linda's mother. I was penniless and not a very proficient artist then, but my girl stuck by me and we had a wonderfully happy life together. . . . Even after Linda arrived," he added with playful emphasis.

It grew dark outside as they ate and the stars were twinkling when they finished doing the dishes together. Jeff handed Linda the dish towel with a useful grimace.

"Here I am letting you get me in bad habits even before we're hitched."

"I have it on the best authority that to train a husband, a gal has to begin early," she said impishly. The smile faded as a knock sounded on the door. "Callers at this time of night?" she frowned.

Mr. Hardy opened the door and stepped back a little as Coulter's stocky figure was silhouetted against the night. He looked as though braced for an argument and the outline of a shoulder holster was distinct beneath his leather jacket.

"Looks like the rent is due again, Hardy," he said shortly.

Jeff felt his muscles grow taut. Coulter was in no hurry for the rent.

GROSSLY EXAGGERATED

Pittsburgh, (AP)—Everyone was all set for the funeral today of Harvey Campbell, 77—that is everyone except Campbell.

His friends were paying last respects to him at a funeral home until Campbell walked in and asked the but he was deliberately using it as an excuse to bring his differences with Jeff to a head. He stepped forward, fists clenched, but Mr. Hardy waved him back. "I'll handle this, Jeff."

He turned to Coulter determinedly. "Irskine has told us he owns this property and we believe him. You're collecting no further rent from us."

Coulter's eyes had the cold metallic lustre of ball bearings. "You're making a mistake, Hardy. I own this land and I don't let people live on it for nothing. I can get an eviction notice."

"Since you control most of the office-holders in McClellan, I've no doubt you can. But just remember that your balliwick takes in very little territory — there's a greater law in Arizona than yours, Coulter."

Coulter sneered openly. "Try getting the law on your side without a little palm oil and see how far you get."

He was so obnoxiously sure of himself and defiant that Jeff's hand moved toward the loaded Winchester that he kept available. He picked it up casually holding it crosswise.

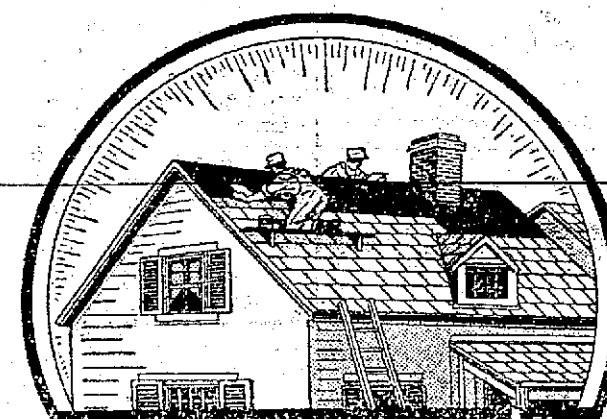

"You never were welcome on this property, Coulter, and you're not now. I suggest you leave—at once."

Coulter's face took on a purple tinge. "An unarmed man can't challenge a rifle but you're going to be sorry for this—all of you."

His evil look included Linda and Hardy before he turned and stamped down the steps.

MERCHANDISE CROWDS PUBLIC OUT OF STORE

Ivanhoe, N. C. (AP)—The "merchant prince of Ivanhoe" runs the oldest general store in the south—it is so crowded with goods the customers can't enter.

There no longer even is room inside for the owner, 77-year-old Charley Corbett. He sells from the front porch of his crossroads emporium in this small community of 300 persons. He's considering opening another store.

That won't be anything new for Corbett. As soon as one store overflows with unsold wares he clamps on a padlock and starts anew in the nearest available building.

Can't Resist Buying

In forty years he has filled up three weatherbeaten ancient wooden stores with his unusual merchandising policy—which consists of buying something from every salesman who comes down the pike and piling it helter skelter in a jumble on the floor.

"Old Charley just can't resist buying," said an old customer.

The present store is packed from front to rear door, from floor to rafters, with canned food, stale bread, plowpoints, grits, stockings, cornflakes, salt, soda pop and bolts of cloth. The locked stores of other years are also moldering wildernesses of unsold goods.

Corbett, a gentle-eyed man with long moustaches, won't discuss the reason why he has gone through life accumulating unmarketed merchandise. He has never held a sale. Asked if most of his stock wouldn't spoil, he said dreamily:

Everything You Want

"I sell of it. Most anybody who comes along wants to buy something. Yes, sir, it's a fact. I keep on selling something every once in a while in the capitalist way. It's a good investment."

Old Charley peered into the cluttered interior.

"There's a combination in there of pretty near everything you'd want," he said. But only old Charley could tell where it was. Once four women interested in antiques traveled more than 100 miles from Raleigh to see if he had any old-fashioned ladies' hats for sale. He did.

Women who couldn't find stockings in the city department stores during the war years should have come to Charley Corbett. He had boxes full of them. He still has—the same boxes, the same stockings.

His Pocket Is His Office

Whether he operates at a profit or a loss is his secret. Unmarried, he lives alone in a rented room a few yards from his store. He used to farm himself but now rents out his tobacco lands to tenants.

"The fellow who used to run the grocery store liked to go fishing," he said, explaining his start in the business world. "He'd send a boy investigation, including the blood spot, the spectacles and the overturned lantern in front of the structure. He said the entry door was closed and hooked when he saw a huddled form lying in the semi-darkness at the back end of a feeding entry. He notified the authorities. He said Mrs. McKinney had last seen Humpert on Monday.

Doctor Johnson gave a detailed report of findings of his examination of Humpert's body. He said the 17 gashes on Humpert's head were distributed over the entire hair-covered section of his head but that the fatal blow or blows which caused an H-shaped depressed fracture of the skull were at the back of the head.

The doctor said Mr. Humpert had suffered from rheumatic heart disease and some other physical ailments "but they didn't kill him."

Asked for his opinion, Doctor Johnson said he believed Mr. Humpert had been killed by "a pretty hard blow" by a blunt instrument. The fatal blow could have caused instant death but it would not have been inevitably so, he added.

Trooper Testifies

Corporal Jenkins' testimony was brief. He told of getting the call at 5:10 p. m. March 26 and of going to the Humpert property and finding the body in the barn. "On March 31, we apprehended Robert L. Staley and upon being questioned he admitted he was present when Humpert was beaten," the officer said. He also told of Staley's admission concerning the theft of $129 from the Humpert house, later changing the confession to cover loot of about $1,570.

Staley re-enacted the crime for officers April 1 and Simmons was apprehended later that day. He corroborated Staley's confession. Corporal Jenkins testified. He said both men had been warned that any statements they made could be used against them. Simmons re-enacted his role in the burglary-slaying April 2, the witness said.

A stenographic record of the testimony was made by Mrs. Paul Singmaster, a secretary in the office of Mr. Bullett.

over with the key to his store and ask me to run it for him. Got so I was spending more time in his store than I was on the farm. So I bought some groceries one day and started selling for myself."

His office is in his side coat pocket. Each new letter goes on the inside of the bundle there, and when business is slack Charley answers the letters, peeling them off from the outside of the bundle.

"Yes, I give credit," he said, "you'd be surprised at the people that don't pay up—and those that do aren't in any hurry."
